Charlie Smith, ex-slave, 131 today

BARTOW, Fla. (UPI) — Uncle Sam and Charlie Smith have something in common. They both have July 4th as a birthday and both have been around for a long time.

Wednesday, Uncle Sam will be 197 years old as the nation celebrates its independence.

On that same day, Charlie Smith, a one-time slave, will celebrate his 131st birthday.

Unlike the fourth of July fireworks, picnics and other hoopla that accompanies the nation's birthday celebration, Charlie Smith will note his birthday with little ceremony in this central Florida community.

Nothing much is planned officially for Charlie but he will receive some visitors from the area at his little two-room concrete block home, along with a two-foot by three-foot birthday card printed for the occasion by the Polk County Democrat.

The weekly newspaper has prepared the card from photographs of memorable events of the past year or so involving Charlie.

It will include photographs of Charlie meeting Mayor Sam Yorty during a visit to Los Angeles, and of Charlie attending the launch last December of the Apollo 17 astronauts.

The Chamber of Commerce will honor Charlie at a breakfast July 19. He was honored on Father's Day by a national steakhouse chain as being the nation's oldest father. His 71-year-old son Chester, his only known relative, resides two blocks away.

Charlie claims to have been born in Liberia, Africa, in 1842 and was kidnaped and brought to this country in 1854 where he was sold at a slave auction in New Orleans.

TV cameras guide fire crews in 'One Horse' brush blaze

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Fire fighters guided by aerial television pictures of California's largest brush fire of the season struggled Tuesday to close the last few miles of open front.

The "One Horse Fire," believed started by children playing with fireworks, was declared 80 per cent contained at more than 10,000 acres. Officials said full control was several days away.

A helicopter equipped with a television camera flew over the burn area and made a videotape recording that later was played back over a closed circuit TV to brief fire bosses supervising the battle.

About two an done half miles of open fire line in a rugged area of sheeer cliffs remained to be closed late Tuesday. A mountain rescut team from Calvaras County was expected on the scene early Wednesday with rock climbing gear to help fire fighters.

For the most part, however, firemen were letting the fire burn itself out against the cliffs on Mt. San Jacinto above this desert resort area.

'THE NEW COLOSSUS'

Since 1885, the Statue of Liberty has raised her beacon aloft in New York Harbor, the symbol of a nation's ideals and of the now-strained friendship between the United States and France. The massive copper goddess of freedom, her tablet bearing the date of the nation's birth, was given another title in 1908 when Emma Lazarus' poem, "The New Collossus," was attached to the statute's base. Over 16 million immigrants have passed her vigilant gaze to become Americans.

'Smear' claimed by White House

Press hit in imbroglio over home

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — The White House Monday accused those suggesting wrongdoing by President Nixon in the purchase of his home here of engaging in "smear charges."

"I would say the President is appalled by the consistent effort being undertaken in a malicious —I don't know if you can use libelous in terms of the President —but these constant, malicious efforts to suggest there was wrongdoing in the purchase of this property," said Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler.

EARLIER STORY on F-2

"Apparently there are those who want to suggest wrongdoing on the part of the President They have no basis whatsoever to do so."

Ziegler's remarks were sparked by a news story in the Monday editions of a southland newspaper saying that special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox has opened a preliminary inquiry into the purchase of Nixon's homes here and in Key Biscayne, Fla.

Ziegler, his voice rising, told newsmen that there was "no basis" for these reports. He noted that Cox issued a statement in Washington saying he requested information on the purchases because he was asked about them at a news conference and knew absolutely nothing about them. The Cox statement said there was "no basis whatsoever" for the newspaper report.

Inquiries by a Cox assistant into previous stories published by the paper apparently were the basis for the claim that Cox was investigating the transactions, Ziegler said.

Ziegler said that statements and news stories which "suggest use of campaign funds, suggest any impropriety in the purchase of his home are malicious, ill-founded and scurrilous in nature and are categorically, flatly untrue."

He said he was appalled that "these types of smear charges are brought against the President of the United States."

Under persistent questioning, however, Ziegler declined to provide any more details of the financial transaction by which Nixon acquired his San Clemente estate than were contained in the White House press release issued May 25.

He said the details of the transaction that have been announced are "precise, accurate and factual" and that no other information would be forthcoming.

Low tax on San Clemente estate denied in statement

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — The Western White House said Tuesday that reports President Nixon was undertaxed by as much as $55,000 on his San Clemente property was just one more example of news stories suggesting that Nixon "or someone in the White house was involved in getting a low tax assessment."

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler told a news conference the question of taxes assessed on the presidential property "is a matter totally up to the tax assessor."

An Orange County newspaper reported Monday that Nixon was undertaxed by at least $25,000 and perhaps as much as $55,000 during the past three years because the Orange County assessor's office consistently put a low market value on the Western White House.

Nixon paid $1.5 million in 1969 for the 24.6-acre estate and the General Services Administration spent more than $700,000 on improvements. The account said the Orange County assessor's office appraised the property at $1.37 million.

Ziegler said he had been informed by the White House counsel's office that in California generally, tax appraisals are about 20 per cent below market value.

"There is nothing for me to say," Ziegler said. "The tax assessor should assess."

He said stories suggesting or implying misuse of presidential authority or prestige to personally enrich the President were totally without basis and stemmed from the climate of suspicion resulting from the Watergate affair.

William M. Bennett, chairman of the state Board of Equalization which monitors assessment practices in California, said the board's staff had conducted a "preliminary inquiry" into the assessment procedures used on Nixon's property.

Bennett said the inquiry was undertaken after "complaints given to me about this situation from Orange County itself." He said this "has come to the point where the inquiry shifts to the assessor."

"It seems to me there is a burden on this assessor to tell the public if he had these figures (the $700,000 GSA improvements.")

MASTERS OF THE SKIES

President Nixon named John L. McLucas, left, undersecretary of the Air Force since 1969, to become the Secretary of the Air Force, succeeding retiring Robert Seamans. Nixon also named Gen. George Brown, right, to succeed retiring Gen. John Ryan as chief of staff of the Air Force. Brown is presently commander of the Air Force Systems Command.

Traditional, and zany, Fourth

Family holiday for Bob Hope kin

By United Press International

Bob Hope flew 53 nieces, nephews, grandnieces and grandnephews from Cleveland to Los Angeles for a spaghetti dinner Tuesday night and a "real old-fashioned" Fourth of July picnic with California relatives Wednesday.

All across the country, Americans celebrated or prepared to celebrate the nation's 197th birthday with fireworks, parades, festivals, concerts, regattas and watermelon feeds.

The star-spangled festivities that honor the July 4, 1776 declaration of independence from England ranged from the tradition to the somewhat zany.

The National Safety Council urged parents to take their children to public fireworks displays instead of staging "do-in-your-self" pyrotechnics.

The federal government meantime is considering a nationwide ban on everything but a few "safe" fireworks, including sparklers, pinwheels, and Roman candles. And this may be the last Fourth of July celebrated—legally—by the pop of firecrackers.

The annual fireworks display on the Detroit River was set for Tuesday night as part of the Detroit-Windsor Freedom Festival.

Four hundred avid rockthrowers gathered on Mackinac Island, Mich., for the International Stone Skipping Contest. The 8th annual U.S. Pillow Fighting Championships — with the competitors seated on greased pipe over a bed of mud —were to be waged at Kenwood, Calif.

Residents of Atlanta could watch 70,000 conventioneering Shriners stage their annual parade, and an estimated quarter million persons were expected to watch the annual fireworks display from the top of Stone Mountain.

Chicagoans could choose between a fireworks gala at lakefront Soldier Field and a fireworks and thrill show in suburban Evanston. San Francisco scheduled its usual fireworks display at Candlestick Park following a "Friendship Day Parade" observing both U.S. and Philippine independence days.

In Los Angeles the Pop Symphony orchestra will perform for two hours Wednesday afternoon. Pasadena prepared its 47th annual Rose Bowl fireworks spectacular (350 giant aerial bombs) and Long Beach had its 24th annual Inboard Speedboat Regatta.

In hundreds of communities, youngsters and clowns will strut down Main Street, bands will play at city parks and flags will blossom along residential streets. Twenty fireworks display permits were issued in Louisville, Ky., and surrounding Jefferson County.

Traffic accidents expected to kill 240 during holiday

By United Press International

Holiday-minded motorists headed for vacation spots Tuesday risking both the dangers of the road and the possibility in some areas of gasoline shortages.

As many as 240 persons may die in traffic accidents between 6 p.m. Tuesday and the end of the Fourth of July holiday period at midnight Wednesday, the National Safety Council said.

The council urged motorists to avoid speeding and excessive drinking and to buckle seat belts to reduce the number of accidents. It said statistics show drinking is a factor in at least half of fatal motor accidents and three out of 10 such accidents involve cars driven too fast or too fast for conditions.

Automobile associations, government officials and gasoline companies urged reduction of speeds for another reason—to conserve limited gasoline supplies.

Spot checks in advance of the holiday indicated most distributors expected sufficient supplies of gas to handle the holiday rush. But the American Automobile Association reported that the number of service stations curtailing hours was higher than in past summers.

The safety council estimated that between 180 and 240 persons. would die in traffic during the 30-hour holiday period. Some 10,000 to 12,000 others will receive disabling injuries in highway accidents, it said.

Rubella tests may delay weddings

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Brides-to-be in 17 counties where sufficient facilities are available to perform premarital German measles tests on women may be required to wait several days for test results, it was disclosed Tuesday.

"Couples should take this into consideration when deciding on a wedding date," said Dr. Earl Brian, state health and welfare secretary.

Depending on what city the test is performed, he haid, the lapsed time for the test vary from 24 hours to a week.

Brian said legislation (SB322) signed by Gov. Ronald Reagan Saturday delayed the effective date of the mandatory test until Jan. 1 in 41 counties that the state Public Health Department declared had insufficient blood test laboratory facilities.

It is hoped sufficient facilities will be ready in the 41 counties by Jan. 1.

The 17 counties where adequate test facilities are available included San Francisco, San Diego, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Sacramento, Orange, Monterey, Alameda, Humboldt, Madera, Placer, San Bernardino, San Luis Obispo, Sutter, Tulare, Ventura and Yolo.

When the original law requiring the test went into effect early this year, it was discovered that there were not enough facilities to administer and certify the mandatory test, threatening some 900 marriages a day.

As an interim measure, the Public Health Department ordered county clerks to advise couples they could get around the measles test by having a Superior Court judge sign a waiver. Without the waiver, clerks legally are prohibited from issuing licenses without the woman having a physician's certificate of rubella exam.

Timely hang-up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidential counsel Leonard Garment told Senate investigators Tuesday the White House needs more time to consider their request for files relating to the Watergate scandal.

Samuel Dash, chief counsel to the Senate Watergate Committee, said Garment cited the massive number of documents the committee wants to examine and photocopy.

Among the documents are the files of former presidential aides and news summaries of the Watergate case which were given to President Nixon. The committee has heard testimony that Nixon often wrote notes from the news summaries for followup action by his aides.

"They want to give us a positive response," Dash said of the White House staff. "But it will take a couple of days to make that decision and get back to us."

Railroad on way out

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The bankrupt Penn Central Railroad was given permission Tuesday to file with the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) a plan to liquidate by Oct. 31 unless the carrier receives federal aid by Oct 1.

Judge John Fp. Fullam of the U. S. District Court thus rejected requests by Pennsylvania Gov. Milton J. Shapp and the State of New York for a 90 day delay in a ruling on the liquidation plan.

Last Thursday, the Penn Central's three trustees filed a plan of reorganization that called for closing down the giant rail network and auctioning off the rolling stock.

The trustees said this was the only alternative unless the railroad received massive federal aid. In the past, the trustees had said as much as $750 million in federal aid would be needed by Penn Central.

A brief word about...

No rationing of gas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Administration measures to combat the fuel shortage do not include rationing gas to motorists, government oil policy chiefs said Tuesday.

William Simon, the chairman of the President's Oil Policy Committee, said, "We are not considering rationing at the present time and any reports that the government has printed rationing stamps or cards is not true."

Duke R. Ligon, director of the Department of Interior's Office of Oil and Gas, joined Simon in the prepared statement which said various plans were under consideration but "these do not include rationing at the consumer level."

Dollar stays weak

BONN (UPI) — The value of the dollar rallied briefly Tuesday and then sagged to exchange rates that approached or exceeded the previous day's record lows in several major European money centers.

Some continental dealers predicted even further declines in value for the U.S. currency.

In Frankfurt, the dollar opened higher at 2.412 West German marks and headed down from there all day to a closing median of 2.39 marks, off almost a pfennig from Monday's close at 2.397 marks. The dollar hit its record low in West Germany earlier Monday at 2.382 marks.

The dollar hit record lows Tuesday

Casualty of shuffle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Dr. Gordon K. MacLeod, director of Health Maintenance Organization services, became Tuesday the second federal health official in a week to announce his resignation in protest against administration reorganization of health services.

MacLeod quoted from an internal memorandum in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare which he said approved action to "submerge HMO services in a bureau of community health services."

"It is with some regret that I feel obliged to resign my position with the federal government and what was an important federal initiative to improve the health of the American people," MacLeod, 44, told UPI in a telephone interview.

Administration officials in charge of the reorganization, which is nearing completion, declined comment.

Butterfly power

HOUSTON (UPI) — An electronically reproduced photograph of the sun, released by NASA Tuesday, has given scientists their first look at the magnetic field of earth's nearest star.

The picture, produced on the ground by electronic signals from a powerful telescope on the Skylab space station, is a gray mass with white streaks in a butterfly shape that represents the magnetic field. It is believed this field affects the earth's weather and communications.

Juice jolted

MONTREAL (UPI) — A bolt of lightning that struck the government-owned hydro-electric plant knocked out power in two-thirds of the province of Quebec late Tuesday, including the cities of Montreal and Quebec, and trapped thousands in subways, elevators and rush hour traffic.

Suicide's wife bitter

No POW prosecutions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Army and the Navy Tuesday dropped charges of collaborating with the enemy against seven former prisoners of war, saying there was not enough evidence to support the accusations.

Army Secretary Howard H. Callaway and Navy Secretary John W. Warner also said the charges filed May 29 by Air Force Col. Theodore Guy —who had been senior officer in the POW camp where the men were held —violated "the policy of the Depatment of Defense against holding trials for alleged propaganda statements."

The action by the two civilian service secretaries followed by six days the apparent suicide death of an eighth enlisted man, Marine Sgt. Abel L. Kavanaugh of Denver. Kavanaugh's widow has charged the accusations were "fictitious" and drove her husband over the edge.

Rep. Olin E. Teague, D-Tex., former chairman of the House Veterans' Affairs committee, said in a statement that the charges "certainly contributed to the death of Sgt. Kavanaugh."

The Pentagon, Teague said, "should order that no former POW should give news releases saying that charges will be made on another former POW."

The men charged by Guy, in addition to Kavanaugh, were Spec. 4 Michael P. Branch of Highland Heights, Ky.; Staff Sgt. Robert P. Chenoweth of Portland, Ore.; Staff Sgt. James A. Daly Jr. of New York; Staff Sgt. King D. Rayford of Chicago; and Staff Sgt. John A. Young of Grayslake, Ill., all of the Army; and Pvt. Frederick L. Elbert Jr. of Brentwood, N.Y., and Staff Sgt. Alfonso R. Riate of Santa Rosa, Calif., both Marines.

All were captured in South Vietnam in 1967 and 1968, and were later transferred to a prison camp called The Plantation in North Vietnam where Guy was commanding officer.

Guy charged them May 29 with aiding the enemy, disobeying orders, seeking asylum in North Vietnam, attempting to join the North Vietnamese Army, taking part in an antiwar group called the Peace Committee, and making model airplanes for North Vietnamese soldiers to use in target practice.

Guy alleged that the men also cooperated with their captors in a variety of propaganda activities in order to receive favorable treatment. He said in return they got extra food, field trips, larger living quarters and other benefits not enjoyed by POWs who refused to cooperate with the North Vietnamese.

Young's wife said she was naturally happy about the dismissal of charges but sorry the entire incident apparently cost Kavanaugh his life. "It is sad that some guy had to die. We aren't going to forget that," Mrs. Young said.

Defense Department sources said a major factor in dismissal of the charges was that virtually all the accusations were based on hearsay and circumstantial evidence. The two service secretaries were not this specific in their statements on the dismissal, which were issued by the Pentagon.

Both secretaries said their legal staffs advised them to throw out the charges for lack of evidence and because of the general Pentagon policy of forgiving returned POWs for propaganda activities. Each also cite dthe hardships and suffering the enlisted men had undergone as prisoners, saying this had to be considered in judging any alleged activities in prison.

Ex-prisoners call death needless

By United Press International

The handful of former prisoners of war accused of disobeying orders while held by the North Vietnamese were "glad" the charges were dropped Tuesday, but felt one POW's life would have been saved if the dismissals had come one week sooner.

An Army Specialist in Kentucky and the wife of another POW in Chicago felt Marine Sgt. Larry Abel Kavanaugh would still be alive if the charges had been dropped last week. Kavanaugh, an apparent suicide victim, was reported despondent over the charges in the last days before his death last Wednesday.

July 4, 1976: target date of cultural center

POMONA — The spirit of Independence Day took on added meaning today with the announcement that a Citizens' Committee of '76 will be formed here to push for the construction in time for the nation's bicentennial in 1976 of a proposed social and cultural center.

"If we are going to celebrate the 100th anniversary of our city and the 200th anniversary of our country in 1976, let's do it in a significant way," reads a telegram sent to David H. Mahoney, national chairman of the American Revolution Bi-Centennial Commission.

The telegram was sent by the local group's acting chairman, Mrs. Harry Williamson. The 100th anniverssry of Pomona's founding falls in 1975.

"Let's do something worthwhile by building a cultural center which we and our children can enjoy for years and even generations to come," the telegram says.

The citizens' committee started circulating a "Declaration of Purpose" pledging to work toward the construction of a civic auditorium and theater of the performing arts as part of a Pomona social and cultural center "as a fitting way to memorialize the bicentennial celebration of the Declaration of Independence."

Included are the signatures of Mrs. Williamson, Mrs. Opal DeBeeson, Mrs. Roman Ziolkowski, Fred Graff, Drew Dobosh, Warren Arthur, Dr. Robert Davis, Otto Knudsen, Ray Woods, G. Stanton Selby C. Mack Milliland, Mrs. Robert C. Leimbach.

Mrs. William G. Herrera, Mrs. Harry Gousha, Mrs. Lee Taylor, Alfonse Fages, Miss Pam Cumbie, Miss Robyn Whitney, Miss Marrilee Drake, James Lane, Frank Cummings, Mrs. Ivan Walks and Mrs. Helen Worness.

The declaration implores "city fathers to take all necessary steps and in their official capacity to help bring to a great and resounding climax, this community facility and lend to it their moral support as well."

Although at present no funds are in sight for the project, the grass-roots group is looking into the possible sale of bonds. The group has no official ties with city government.

U.N. stats tell you where it's at UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The place to go if you like company is Macao. But if you want solitude, it's Greenland or the Spanish Sahara where you'll find it.

Macao, the tiny Portuguese enclave on the Chinese coast, has at 81,440 persons per square mile the heaviest population density in the world, according to United Nations statistics released Tuesday.

Greenland and the Spanish Sahara are at the other end of the scale with an official density of zero persons per square mile.

The U.N. publication lists Greenland with 39,600 inhabitants in its 840,000 square miles —most of it covered in ice—and the Spanish Sahara with 76,425 persons in its 102,680 square miles.

Several countries, including Botswana, Libya, Mauritania and Mongola, were listed as having a population density of nearly zero per square mile.

The figures were drawn from the U.N. Statistical Yearbook 1972, which covers longevity and population figures through 1971.

According to the figures, a male child born in Sweden can expect to live for 71.85 years while a female can expect to live 76.54 years. Norway's average is not far behind—71.09 years for males and 76.83 for females.

In the United States, the average figures for both males and females was set at 71.1 years.

In the population ratings, Macao is far down the list of overall numbers, but its 248,636 inhabitants are crowded into six square miles. The principality of Monaco runs a reasonably close second to Macao with its 23,400 citizens packed into 467 acres. Other places with a lot of people living close together include Gibraltar, West Berlin, Hong Kong, Singapore and East Berlin.

Another place high in population density is Vatican City. The yearbook lists its population as 548 males and 342 females and its sizeas 108.7 acres.

This compared with populations densities of the Netherlands with 870 persons per square mile, Belgium 869, Japan 371, Britain 621, Indian 459 and Israel 405.

At the other end of the scale were the United States with 60 persons per square mile, the Soviet Union with 30 and Canada with 5½.

The Maldives republic, the newest member of the United Nations with a listed population of 103,801, rates fairly high on the density chart with 902 persons for each of its 115 square miles. The country is composed of 2,000 islands, but only 220 of them are inhabited.

'Too much' love blamed for Liz-Burton separation

NEW YORK (UPI) — Elizabeth Taylor announced a separation from her husband Richard Burton Tuesday, saying, "Maybe we have loved each other too much." She said she hoped they will get back together "ultimately."

In a thin scrawl on Regency Hotel stationery, Mrs. Burton wrote, "I am convinced it would be a good and constructive idea if Richard and I are separated for a while."

The handwritten note was copied by the Burtons' agent, John Springer, and distributed to newsmen. Springer said Richard Burton knew of the letter, but had no comment.

"They have agreed to separate and Mrs. Burton asked me to give out this letter," Springer said. He declined to comment on how Burton was taking the separation.

Mrs. Burton wrote, "Maybe we have loved too much, (not that I ever believed such a thing was possible) but we have been in each others' pockets constantly never being apart except for matters of life and death and I believe it has caused a temporary breakdown in communication."

Richard Burton was staying at the home of his attorney in Quogue, N.Y., Springer said.

"I believe with all my heart that this separation will ultimately bring us back to where we should be—and that is together," she said.

Mrs. Burton said she will return to California in a few days "because my mother is there."

She ended the note with a plea to "wish us well during this most difficult and unhappy time."

Springer said, "The only thing I can say is that nobody else is involved."

Bermuda ready for assault by 'weak' Hurricane Alice

HAMILTON, Bermuda (UPI) — The British resort island of Bermuda took emergency measures Tuesday night in preparation for the first hurricane of the season, a minimum-force storm named Alice.

"We're putting up storm shutters on shops and windows and getting ready but, since it's a small hurricane, nobody's worried," said Gordon Robinson, editor of the Mid-Ocean News.

"Our houses are solid and we've had these experiences before. There is no panic."

Sustained, heavy rain and steady 30 mile an hour winds hit Bermuda in the early afternoon.

Alice, carrying 75 mile an hour winds, was expected to strike the island about 9 p.m. EDT. At 3 p.m. EDT, the center of the hurricane was about 100 miles south of Bermuda, near latitude 30.8 north, longitude 65.5 west and moving straight north at 12 to 15 miles per hour.

Robinson said Chief of Police L.M. Clark had mobilized the island's Emergency Measures Organisation to deal with "whatever might happen such as downed electric lines, or whatever" but said it was merely a normal precaution.

Bermuda is located 570 miles due east of Cape Hatteras, N.C.

Home building booms in Ontario

ONTARIO — Available land and an overflow from Los Angeles and Orange counties may be responsible for the large number of single-family homes being constructed here.

Building permits were issued last month for 102 homes, having a combined valuation of $1.9 million. This boosted the totals so far this year to 205 homes and a $4 million valuation.

New homes are mostly being constructed in southern part of the city. Undeveloped land here has been zoned for agriculture uses.

Why the surge of new home construction? "We have a highly desirable area," said Mayor Howard J. Snider. "Ontario is close to both Los Angeles and Orange counties, and completion of the Pomona Freeway has been helpful.

"The cost of homes in Ontario would be less than in Orange County because of the price of land," he added. "Orange County builders have found here a place where they can build. Many of the new homes are sold before they are completed."

The mayor also cited the Ontario International Airport, Ontario Motor Speedway and local industries as helping to attract new families. "The Ontario area is on the threshhold of real economic expansion."

The Presley Development Co. of Newport Beach obtained permits last month to construct 39 homes in southwest Ontario, and Ontario Summerplace Developers of Cerritos received permits to build 62 homes in southeast Ontario.

The Presley Co. will build one and two-story homes, having from five to seven rooms. Valuations will range from $13,520 to $25,740.

These will be located in the 1500 block of S. Palmetto Avenue, 1400 blocks of S. Cypress and S. Granite avenues, 1500 block of S. Briar Avenue, and 800 and 900 blocks of W. Jacaranda and W. Eycalyptus streets.

The firm was issued permits last April for another 54 homes in the same area and plans to take out permits for 79 more homes, officials said.

The Ontario Summerplace Developers will build single-story homes, with five and six rooms. Valuations will range from 16,700 to $18,770.

These will be located is the 100, 200 and 300 blocks of E. Spruce Street, 300 and 400 blocks of E. Philadelphia Street, and the 2100 blocks of S. Cherry, S. Sultana, S. Concord, S. Plum and S. Lemon avenues.

For the month, 115 permits were issued, which represents a $3.2 million valuation. This boosts the totals this year to 530 permits and $7.9 million valuation.

Other permits last month include:

Dwelling alterations, 32, $43,874; industrial building, one, $424,799; commercial and industrial alterations, nine, $24,997; miscellaneous buildings, 31, $67,570; houses converted to other uses, gional Park, $696,500.

The industrial permit is for improvement to General Electric Co.'s jet engine testing cell at the Ontario airport, officials explained. Work is expected to reduce the level of noise during tests.

New OIA budget, new projects

ONTARIO — Increased traffic at Ontario International Airport is reflected in projects being financed in a new budget.

Capital improvements, totaling $242,000, include:

—$180,000 to construct three passenger holding rooms in the terminal building. These will be occupied by airline pssengers who have passed the personal screening and waiting to board aircraft.

—$30,000 to extend a concourse canopy at the terminal building. This is an open area between the terminal building and the airplane boarding area.

—$10,000 to install a third parking lot booth in the public parking area. Traffic "bottlenecks" have developed during recent holidays, officials said.

—$12,000 to construct a 20 by 40 foot electrical shop in the airport maintenance area.

—$10,000 to construct a canopy over an equipment storage area in the maintenance yard.

Another project being proposed but not earmarked in the new budget is repairing the airport's main runway. This is still in the study state, and funds could come from the reserve account, officials explained.

About 1,000 feet of the runway will have to be completely rebuilt and panels in other sections will have to be replaced, they added.

Officials have proposed doing the work in sections at night to prevent a long-term closure of the airport.

The Los Angels Board of Airport Commissioners recently approved a $79 million budget for the Los Angeles Department of Airports, which includes Los Angeles, Van Nuys and Ontario airports.

Administraive and operating expenses were budgeted at $21 million, which included $11 million for salaries; $8 million for materials, supplies and services; $1 million for employes reitrement and health insurance subsidy; and $6 million for a maintenance and operation reserve.

In the capital improvements account, the budget includes $4.3 million to complete projects now in process and $2.8 for projects in the planning stages.

Grain finally being moved

HOUSTON (UPI) — Only 18 freighters are awaiting loads of grain to carry to Russia. Elevator operators at the Port of Houston said Monday these ships should be loaded and on their way by the middle of the month.

Labor disputes, boxcar shortages and a sudden influx of large freighters kept between 40 to 60 ships waiting for months during the winter and spring for Russian wheat shipments.

Youth escapes as pair argue

LOS ANGELES (UPI — The thieves who stole Carlotta Perez' car were surprised to find their loot included an accessory—her 7-year-old son.

Mrs. Perez told police she left her son, Michael, asleep in the back seat of the car, under a sweater, when she stopped at a sandwich shop.

The thieves stopped the auto and got into a fistfight Michael said, so he wandered away. Both the car and Michael were recovered.

Reinecke is not repaying travel costs

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke said Tuesday he has no plans to repay the state for his taxpayer-financed trip to Washington to testify about the ITT-Republican National Convention controversy.

The Republican lieutenant governor said the $375.10 two-day trip during April, 1972, was a "bona fide" and "justifiable" state travel expense. He confessed, however, he was "embarrassed" by disclosure that he had not paid for the trip from his own funds, as he earlier stated.

Reinecke had said the trip to testify before the Senate Judiciary Committee was requested by White House aide Clark McGregor, and that he paid for the flight out of his own funds.

Documents in the office of state Controller Houston I. Flournoy indicated Reinecke filed a travel claim and was paid the $375.10 for air and taxi fare and per diem expenses.

Upland council rejects environmental appeal

UPLAND — The first appeal over an environmental assessment report was turned back this week as the City Council unanimously denied the appeal action.

Neither Raymond L. Berry, a property owner, nor planning commission member Jerry L. Morris was able to present their evidence Monday in opposition to an environmental committee and planning commission decision that gave an environmental green light to a 23-unit subdivision project on 24th Street.

Both men claimed an initial environmental assessment report prepared by the Claraboya Construction Co. contained inaccuracies in at least 10 acres.

A major point, they felt, was a statement by the construction company that the project would drain to the southeast, whereas they were prepared to show that the site would drain in a southwesterly direction.

The drainage question is more than academic to Berry, whose property is immediately adjacent to the proposed subdivision. He is something of a thorn in the construction company's side since the builders want to run sewer and drainage lines across his property.

That problem has been discussed before the council on several occasions in the past. On May 10, the council seriously considered initiating condemnation proceedings aginst Berry to solve the impasse, but dropped the idea after City Atty. Donald Maroney advised postponement until a tentative tract plan and an environmental assessment report had been filed. No further action has been taken thus far, according to Maroney.

In opening council discussion on the appeal Mayor Abner Haldeman asked the council if it wanted to spend the money for an engineering study of the drainage problem.

Councilman George Gibson, admitting some confusion over the whole issue felt a written report "on the best methods of drainage" would be very helpful.

Councilman Harold Bailin also expressed some confusion but for different reasons. "The issue," he said, "is whether the environmental impact of the project justifies a full impact report. We've gotten too far into the property and its controversy. The environmental committee was correct. This project is no differenct from any other proposal."

Both Gibson and Mayor Pro-Tem John E. McCarthy agreed with Bailin on this point, but both also felt that the drainage problem had to be cleared up.

In moving to deny the appeal, Bailin said, "The property doesn't need an EIR (environmental impact report any more than any other similar property."

Hospital chief indicted

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Dr. Joseph P. Lewis, founder and board president of Van Nuys Community Hospital was indicted Monday on six counts of violating Federal income tax laws.

Lewis, 58, was accused of failing to report a total of $288,764 in income between 1967 and 1969, representing nearly $142,000 in unpaid taxes.

A federal grand jury indicted the physician on three counts of attempted income tax evasion for those years and three counts of making false and fraudulent statements under penalty of perjury.

AMERICANISM

If you want your father to take care of you, that's PATERNALISM.

If you want your mother to take care of you, that's MATERNALISM.

If you want Uncle Sam to take care of you, that's SOCIALISM.

If you want your comrades to take care of you, that's COMMUNISM.

On an Aggravation Scale of 10, I would list doors as an eight.

That's right, doors. Those big partitions that adults knock on for entrance and hang wreaths on at Christmas; that kids slam in the summer and leave open all winter.

The other day I stood before the family and said, "You are all probably wondering why I have gathered you together. The truth is I have varicose veins in the neck from shouting, LEAVE THE DOOR OPEN! I thought I would review 'doors' one more time. Save your questions until last. Now, in the winter when the snow is on the ground we leave the doors . . ."

"CLOSED!" they yelled in unison.

"Very good," I said. "And why do we leave them closed?"

"Because Daddy said we were heating up the streets of greater Cleveland."

"Right. Now in the summertime when there is a cool breeze blowing we leave the doors . . ."

"OPEN," they yelled again.

"Wonderful," I said, my eyes misting. "Now the refrigerator door when left ajar all night warms the milk and makes frost on the stove, right?"

"Right!"

"So we leave the refrigerator door . . ."

"CLOSED."

"You're doing fine," I encouraged. "Now here's a toughie. Bathroom doors when not being used should be left open and when they are occupied the door should be closed. Got that? (I saw two taking notes.) The doors of the car should be closed as when they are left open the battery goes dead and Daddy . . ."

"BITES HIS NECKTIE IN HALF," they screamed as one.

"Correct. And that is why, Brucie, you are going to march right out this moment and close the car doors. When I brought in the groceries, I remember distinctly telling you to SHUT THE DOOR!"

"But, Mom . . ."

"Do it!" I ordered. "Any questions?"

One of the children raised his hand. "How are you going to get your keys out of the car that Brucie just locked up?"

"Go out and play," I ordered. "And shut the door."

"But you just said . . ."

"When a person is going crazy before your eyes, you shut the door winter or summer!"

Oil firm official a CGS trustee

CLAREMONT — Louis M. Ream Jr., executive vice president of Atlantic Richfield Co., has been elected a trustee of Claremont Graduate School.

He has also become a member of the board of fellows of Claremont University Center, the central coordinating organization of the Claremont Colleges.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — John S. Gibson Jr., at 70 the dean of the Los Angeles City Council, was re-elected unanimously today to another two-year term as its president.

British ships get approval to 'fire back'

LONDON (UPI) — British warships have been given permission to return fire against Icelandic gunboats harassing trawlers fishing in disputed waters off the coast of Iceland, the navy said Tuesday.

The Icelandic gunboat Aegir Monday fired two rounds at the West German trawler Teutonia. The shells landed "dangerously close" to the British frigate Leopard whose captain warned by radio that he had the authority to fire back.

The spokesman said the Leopard manned battle stations during the incident but did not train her guns on the Aegir and took no part in the dispute.

"Aegir's actions were wholly unpredictable and could have resulted in a collision at sea in which HMS Leopard would have become involved," the spokesman said. "She was naturally concerned."

A naval spokesman said the returning of fire was part of the contingency plans issued to the British captains assigned to protect British trawlers fishing within the disputed 50-nautical mile limit set by Iceland last year.

"This is part of their sailing orders," he said.

Reports from Reykjavik, Iceland's capital, said government authorities were angered by the frigate's threat and "interference" with the gunboat's action against the West German trawlers.

The chief of the British White Fish Authority Monday blamed Iceland of provoking the "cod war" out of selfish disregard for the rights of other nations.

Rattles & straws

Back up the front hall

By JOSEPH FIRMAN

Shortly after "the Big One" (WW II), the nation's homebuilders were faced with the Herculean task of building several million new homes for several million returning GIs — all Corps and Navy vets loaded, Army chaps flat broke.

New house sprang up from Portland, Maine, to Portland, Ore., like magic pumpkins, which many of them turned out to be, but not all that magic. One of the architectural changes (i.e. shortcuts) loftily promoted as "gracious living" and "the modern look," was to eliminate the front hall. I'd as soon they eliminated the bathroom.

Many front doors in the millions of jerrybuilt houses open directly into the living room or "family room," or boast only a vestigial, truncated foyer with just enough room for two people to collide between the water heater and the "hall closet."

Something fine and important and American was lost with the elimination of the front hall. The front hall is where Dad shrugs into his coat in the morning, kisses his wife goodbye, and issues orders to the small fry about their school grades, the length of the front lawn grass and the egg on their chins.

To newcomers arriving for a party, the hall gives a brief reprieve from running the gamut of the other guests. Here is where man adjusts his tie and his wife gives her girdle a last tug.

When unexpected callers are admitted by one of the children, the front hall provides just the interlude the surprised hostess needs to slip into her shoes, snatch up the newspapers, and awaken her husband who is snoring on the couch.

In short, the front hall is the last line of defense of the American home, useful to those arriving and essential to those caught with their plans down.

In addition, the front hall is one of the most versatile and utilitarian rooms in the house. It is, among other things, a coat room. The one chair has so long been heaped with sweaters, jackets and coats that you forget what the chair looks like, if, indeed, theres IS a chair under that composte pile.

The hall is also a storage room for school books, newspapers, handbags, lunch boxes, science projects and odd bits of motorcycle engine. When the weather is showery, it houses bicycles and the patio furniture.

A front hall is usually an athletic supply room where you find (or do not find and trip over) skates, ball bats, tennis rackets, and a scattering of jacks and an occasional toe-shattering barbell.

The front hall is also where you put things to be carried upstairs by Scmeone. That Someone never appers, and the hall becomes a warehouse of clean laundry, empty wastebaskets, stacks of old magazines and packages of toothpaste, shampoo and soap. What people with no front hall do with unwanted tennis balls and unwanted guests I cannot imagine, but I strongly urge the return of the front hall for a better America.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're going to make chores much more difficult for yourself then they really are. It's because of a negative attitude.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You wont be as generous today with those for whom you truly care. You're likely to place your needs first.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There will be a bit of extra turmoil around the house today. A sizeable portion of the blame can be traced to you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Responsibilities that shouldn't be brushed aside will keep you closer to the grindstone today. Grin and bear it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You'll have to watch yourself today. Otherwise, you may find someone you know costing you expenses you could avoid.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is not a good day to seek the aid of persons who are in a position to grant you favors.

LIBRA (SEPT. 23 - Oct. 23) You're likely to withdraw too easily today if you're faced with opposition you didn't expect. Hang in there.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Philosophical differences are a subject to be avoided if you're mixing with friends or groups. You're too critical today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It's going to be a chore to get the person you're teamed up with in gear. Get behind 'em and push.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 20) There's a lesson coming for you today. You'll remember it because its something learned the hard way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Business matters require extra scrutiny today if mistakes are to be avoided. Don't let obligations get overdue.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Family problems will not be solved outside the home through discussions with a third party. Outsiders will offer small help.

Once you eliminate negative ties that bind you to the past your future will brighten. Promise will replace old stumbling-blocks.

Princess to get deluged with gifts

LONDON (UPI) — Anyone like to send a wedding present to Princess Anne and her fiance? Go right ahead.

Ordinarily, members of the British royal family disdain gifts from people they don't know.

But for the November wedding of Queen Elizabeth II's 22-year-old daughter and Lt. Mark Phillips, palace sources say, this rule has been rescinded.

A special room has been set aside at the palace for the reception of gifts, and already they have started coming, the sources said.

They said every gift would be acknowledged and everyone would be seen personally by Anne and Mark.

Every gift will go through a security screening before it gets anywhere near Buckingham Palace. Then it is planned to put the gifts on public exhibition for a month, with admission charges to go to the children's charities in which Anne is interested. The queen, who put her own gifts on show after her 1947 marriage, suggested this, the sources said.

There are also some royal touches to the gifts themselves, said the sources, who already have pinned down what some of the gifts will be:

—From Queen Elizabeth, Anne's first diamond and some of the pearl jewelry which is a royal lady's daytime uniform. For the groom, two horses from the queen's own stable, plus saddles and all the trimmings.

Walt shares insights on photography

Walt here: It's vacation time and along with toothbrushes and travel togs, most journeyers will be toting along a camera or two or three. As a photographer myself, I've often winced at the offensive maneuvers of tourist photogs. So today and tomorrow, I'll share a few insights to keep you from offending others as you photograph.

Understand first of all that your camera's lens acts as a powerful spotlight. Point it at someone and the eyes of every passer-by will rivet on the subject of your focus. The person is made conspicuous. Obviously some people (grade-school boys in particular) love this attention, but many other people become angry or embarrassed.

If you care about people as human beings, your aim in using a camera this summer will be to embrace rather than "rape" your subjects. So some consideration is in order.

Start by avoiding a photographic mob scene. To my eye there's something inherently lewd about a gaggle of photogs all shooting the same subject at once. Perhaps it's the way the subject is dehumanized as the photogs jockey for fresh angles and unexpected vantage points.

If three buddies are clicking away at the "picturesque" market vendor, hie yourself to the other side of the town square.

Then be ready to explain why you're photographing a given subject. Ideally you should always ask people before you invade their privacy and snap pictures. If you lack the language, carry a card that explains in local dialect why you're taking pictures, and where they'll be shown.

If you also carry a few pocket-sized prints of your most successful past "people" photographs, you can reassure the subject as to the friendliness of your lens.

If you stumble upon a picture situation whose mood will be shattered by preliminary conversation, you may choose to shoot a discreet frame or two. (Some photographers disguise their intentions by placing a chum in the foreground, and pretending to shoot him while actually focusing on a background subject.)

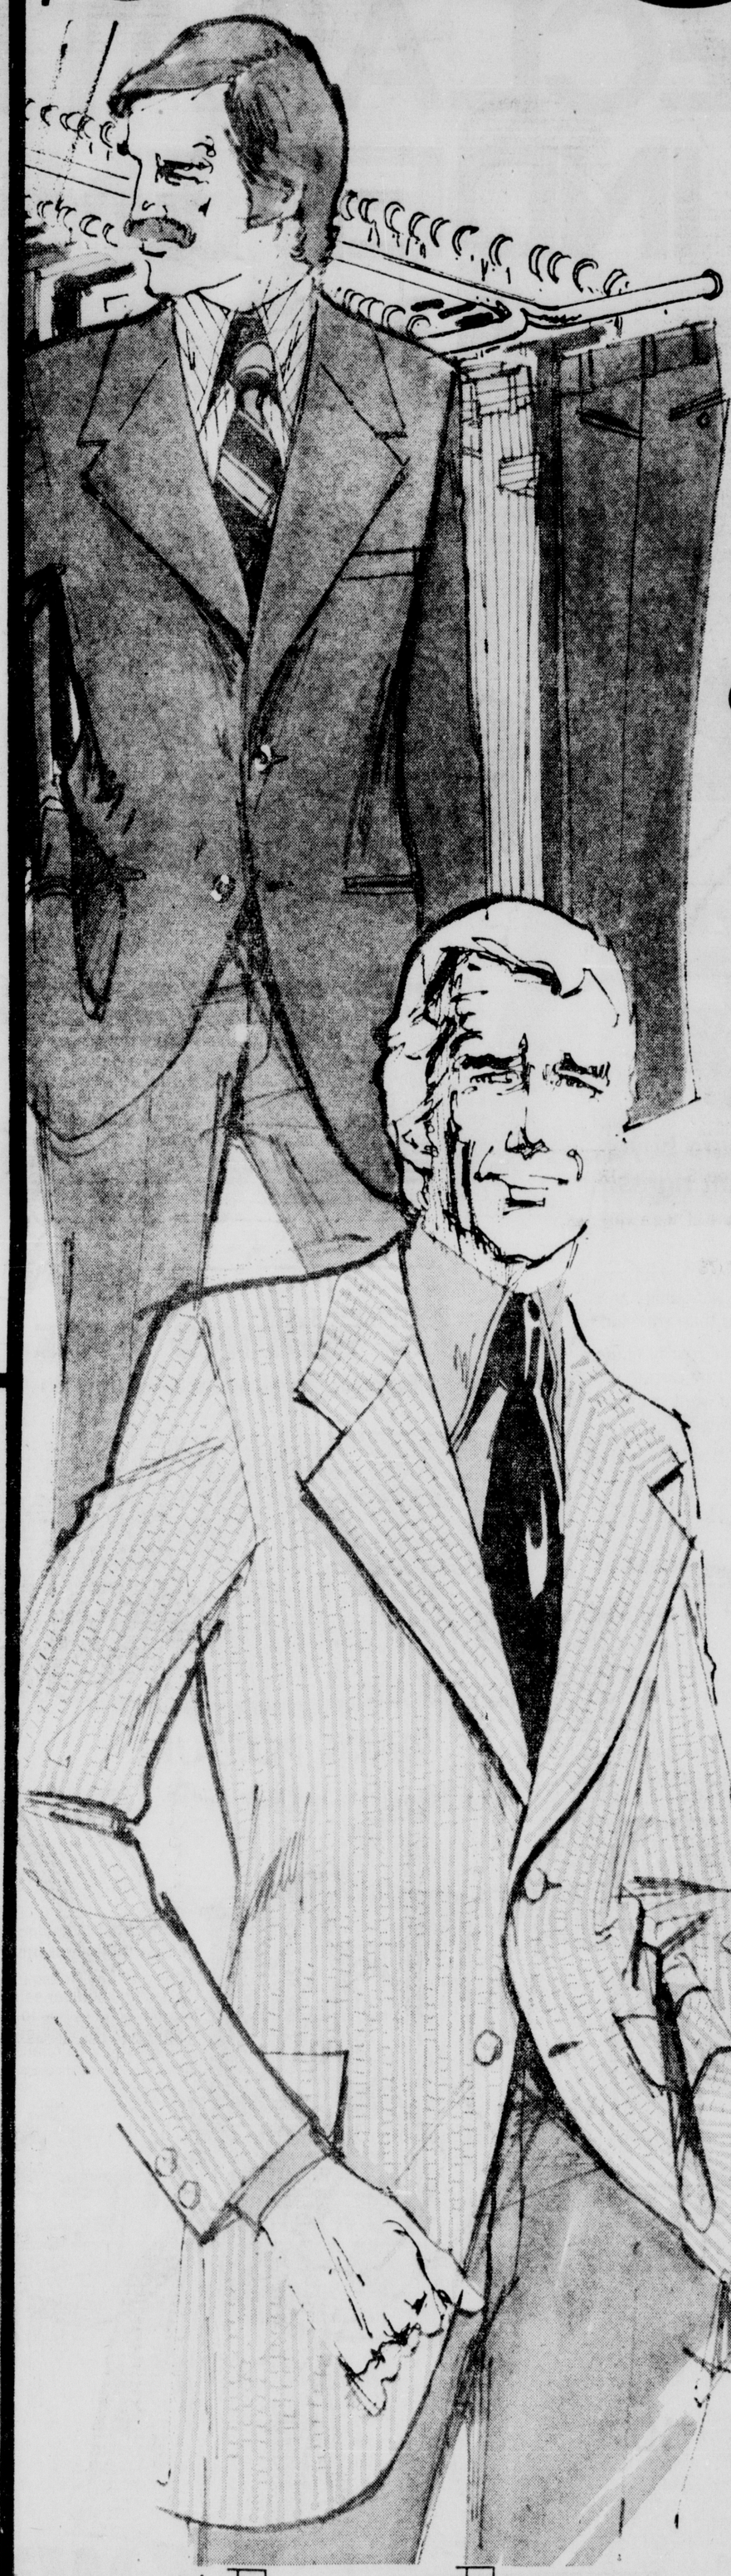

Afterwards, however, I urge you to go over and talk with your real subject and ask permission to shoot a few more pictures, thus reaffirming the person's right to invite or reject your camera's attention.

Possible dialogue: "You look so peaceful sitting there, and the light is so beautiful coming behind you, that I'd like to take some pictures." This reassures the middle-aged that they haven't suddenly become "characters," and minimizes the anxieties of political types that "big brother" is gunning pictures for the FBI, CIA or whatever is their paranoia.

Unless you are positive you'll be able to follow through, don't promise to send prints to the subject. Your intent may be good, but if postvacation poverty prevents you from having pictures printed, it will be a bummer to have an anxious subject waiting in vain for photos that never come.

City will save money on abandoned vehicles

POMONA — The city stands to gain a savings of up to $20,850 this fiscal year under an agreement authorized by the City Council with the California Highway Patrol.

Through the efforts of Fire Chief John Fowlkes, Pomona is one of the first cities to be selected to participate in a new program in which the state will reimburse cities and counties for costs incurred in the removal as public nuisances of abandoned vehicles.

The city's vehicle abatement program is administered by the fire department.

According to the agreement, the CHP will pay up to $20,850 for an estimated 1,500 abandoned vehicles expected to be handled by the city during 1973-74.

Fowlkes said the amount would cover the full costs the city would be expected to pay in operating the program during the fiscal year.

The fire chief noted that the city program in the past has been listed under expenditures in the fire department budget but because of the reimbursement instead would be credited under revenues.

The state program is made possible because of the signing into law last May of Senate Bill 300.

The legislation transferred the administration and operation of the Abandoned Vehicle Trust Fund from the Department of Public Works to the CHP Department.

The law permits disbursement of money in the fund by the CHP to any city or county which establishes procedures for the abatement and removal of abandoned vehicles or parts.

Volunteers cited for top service to the community

POMONA — Sixteen chairmen of neighborhood volunteer groups were cited by the Neighborhood Adult Participation Project (NAPP) here for outstanding community services.

Recipients of the awards were:

Mrs. Carmalita Woods, William McCoy, Mrs. Robertha M. Walker, Osborn Bridgeford, Mrs. Alice Bryant, Mrs. Evelyn Massey, Mrs. Henry Ella Smith, Mrs. Naomi Woods, Eddie Warren, Mrs. Henry Ortiz, Mrs. Connie Nash, David Evans, Richard Miley, Samuel Lee Wauls, Mrs. Lupe Ruiz, Leroy Welch and Mrs. Eline Neat.

Awards were presented by Louise Harden, NAPP director.

Claremont woman injured as car leaves the road

POMONA — A Claremont woman was injured Monday afternoon in an accident she said resulted when her pet dog's head was caught in her car's steering wheel and the car ran off the road and down an embankment.

Genive Mae Rickman, 60, of 1287 Briarcroft Road, was reported in satisfactory condition at Pomona Valley Community Hospital. She suffered facial injuries and injuries to her ankle and arm and a mild concussion.

Police reported the car struck about 150 feet of barbed wire fencing bordering Mission Boulevard east of Temple Avenue shortly after 5 p.m. They quoted the driver as saying her dog was lying on her lap as she drove and she was unable to turn the steering wheel after its head got stuck. The dog was picked up by humane officers when its owner was taken to the hospital.

Officer slate is installed by Toastmasters

POMONA — Emmett J. Jones, advertising manager of the Progress-Bulletin, was recently installed as president of the Pomona Toastmasters Club 110 during an installation dinner at the Castaways.

Jones, who previously served the club as its educational vice president, replaced Currier Thatcher in the leadership role.

Joe Jones, lieutenant governor for Toastmasters Division B, presided over the installation ceremonies.

Other officers installed were Bob Dusenbury, educational vice president; Ben Keith, administrative vice president; Herb Stampfl, treasurer; and Bob Dwight, sergeant-at-arms.

Metal shop reopening at school

POMONA — The parks and recreation department has announced the reopening of the metal shop at Emerson Junior High beginning July 9.

The shop will be open from 3 to 10 p.m., Monday through Friday, for a six-week term. It is open to the public, but no one under 12 will be admitted.

Projects built in past programs range from a napkin holder to decor for the home. Robert Aguirre will be available to assist with projects.

Cleaner makes good on shrinking coat claim

I purchased a $50 velvet coat on sale for $35 in November of 1972. In late December or early January I took it to the cleaners and inquried about water-repelling my coat. I was told they offered this service and I had it done.

At that time I was not told anything in regard to the process or the possibility of shrinkage.

When I returned to pick up my coat and later tried it on, it had shrunk. The sleeves were a little high water and the fit was very snug. I contacted the cleaners and was told to bring the coat back and they would try to stretch it out. I was also told that there was no responsibility on the part of the cleaners for shrinkage.

When I returned the coat and had it cleaned and stretched out, again upon retrieving the coat I found it still was too snug and shrinkage was evident.

I feel this situation should be remedied by the dry cleaners by some sort of compensation from them or their insurance but the lady I spoke to at the dry cleaners says this is inconceivable. I hope I can receive assistance from you.—I.M., Montclair.

The proprietor of the dry cleaning establishment said you had never come to her for a settlement but had simply handed her a copy of the letter we received. She said you may have talked to someone else.

Her firm waterproofs coats regularly without receiving complaints, she told us.

Your coat, she stated, probably hadn't been preshrunk. After it was stretched, you wore it again to the extent that you had it cleaned a second time.

The proprietor said she would work out a "reasonable settlement." You later said she had paid you $25.

Have you ever head of such a thing as a clear plastic tablecloth? I've looked in many stores with no luck and I think it would be marvelouly practical.

Standard Brands carries clear plastic but it's not meant for this purpose.

I'd love to know where I could buy or order one.—J.G., Pomona.

J. J. Newberry Co. in Pomona Valley Center has very thin clear plastic tablecloths, 52 by 52 inches and 52 by 90 inches, for a pittance.

We heard of one person who buys clear plastic yardage from Woolworth's and uses it over her pretty tablecloths to preserve them.

My husband has been trying four years, off and on, and the past two years consistently to get a copy of his DD 214 (veteran status) form. He is now going to school and has to have the form.

This whole situation is getting quite frustrating! My husband is trying to work five and six days a week, go to school at night and run up and down the road trying to straighten out this mess so he can qualify for his GI benefits. All he gets is transferred from one place to another to get him off their back.—Mrs. H. H., Pomona.

We accumulated a large file on your husband's case and wrote several letters in his behalf, one of them to Congressman George Brown.

He has sent us a copy of a letter from Gordon Elliott, director of the Veternas Administration Regional Office in Los Angeles, saying your husband has been mailed a copy of his DD 214 form.

Elliott urged him to complete and return the application for education benefits as soon as possible, along with current enrollment certificates from his school, because benefits are payable only from the date of claim. However, the regional office will be able to consider a recent telephone conversation with him as an informal claim, making him eligible for benefits from that date.

Pascoe conducts employe seminar

POMONA — Pascoe Steel Corp., a Pomona-based industrial firm, recently held an employe seminar at Griswold's in Claremont.

It was designed to acquaint Pascoe employes with the company's activities in the metal building systems industry.

Program director Ken Kottkamp began with a history of the company, emphasizing its rapid growth. Even though the firm is celebrating its 25th year, its greatest advancements have occurred within the last 14 years, he said.

Department heads described and illustrated functions of their particular areas. Corporate officers related marketing policies and discussed what employes could expect in the future.

Walnut man, 21, jailed for year after robbery

POMONA — David Sanchez, 21, of 19619 Camino De Rosa, Walnut, has been sentenced to the county jail for one year as a condition of probation for robbery.

Sanchez was charged with the Jan. 1 robbery of the Jack-in-the-Box restaurant in West Covina. He also was charged, with Robert Zaragosa Lopez, 19, West Covina, with the robbery Jan. 10 of Lou's Arco service station, La Puente, and the attempted robbery of a market in Downey.

Lopes faces sentencing July 12 on his plea of guilty to one robbery count. The men appeared before Pomona Superior Court Judge Francis Garvey.

Coach will speak at Kiwanis meeting

CLAREMONT — Fortune Gordien, San Bernardino Valley College track and field coach, will tell the Kiwanis Club of Claremont and its Pomona inter-club guests about the world of sports Thursday noon at Griswold's.

Outstanding in the discus event since his college days at USC, Gordon participated in three Olympic Games, and captured medals in all three.

At 50, he set a national record for men over 40 at the Mt. SAC Relays.

Shopping center in Chino wins OK

CHINO — Construction of a community shopping center here inched forward Tuesday night when the City Council approved a resolution to annex 40 acres north of the Pomona Freeway and east of Central Avenue.

The property, undeveloped, was previously pre-zoned for commercial use. The city resolution will be sent to Sacramento for review by state officials. The annexation could become final within six weeks.

Jerry Kittrell, program manager for the Kaiser-Aetna, Corp., the developers, said his firm is anxious to begin. "Once we get approval for the annexation, we will come to the city for building permits," he reported.

The shopping center is scheduled to include a market, drug store, specialty shops, restaurants, motel, service stations and an auto agency.

"We have completed tentative lease negotiations with our anchor tenants, which includes the market and drug store," said Kittrell.

Development may begin north of the freeway and include a motel, service station and restaurant, he added.

The shopping center could be done in one or two stages, depending on the demand for space, said Kittrell.

The annexation was previously approved by the Local Agency Formation Commission.

Reclamation center desperate for glass

POMONA — Don't throw away those empty bottles and jars.

These can be crushed, melted and made into new containers.

Residents may sell their empty bottles and jars each Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., at the Brockway Glass Co., Inc., 1331 Philadelphia St.

They will be paid a penny a pound, or about a half-cent per bottle. Glass delivered to the reclamation center should be relatively clean, free of all metal, and sorted by color.

Residents are hauling their waste glass containers to Southern California centers at peak levels, but the demand for the first time is beginning to exceed the supply, officials noted.

More than two million used bottles and jars are being reclaimed each week at eight centers in the Los Angeles area operated by glass manufacturers.

A developing shortage of soda ash, a key ingredient in glass container production, increases the need for recycling used bottles at this time, they added.

The used containers are made into new containers, thus reducing the demand for new supplies of soda ash, which constitutes about 12 per cent of the raw material needed in glass production.

Since the reclamation program was launched over three years ago, the industry has paid Southern California residents more than $1.3 million. The rate of payments now exceeds $10,000 a week.

The Southern California reclamation began as a pilot program for the massive nationwide recycling project now being conducted by the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute.

Nationally, bottles and jars are being recycled at a rate approaching one billion a year. More than $10 million has been paid to citizens since the program began.

Declarations must live in our deeds

Suppose the drafters of the Declaration of Independence had neglected to add this paragraph to their document:

"And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes, and our Sacred Honor."

It would have been remarkable if any revolution could have been made.

But, of course, the delegates to the Continental Congress of 1776 added that final paragraph, stuck their necks under the shadow of King George's hangman and set to work to make their fine vision an accomplished fact. The Declaration of Independence did not create the Revolution; men did.

One hundred ninety-seven years have passed since that hot summer day in Philadelphia. That historic bit of parchment, faded and scarred, is still a part of mid-twentieth century America. Sometimes, however, we act as though we would like to forget about the acts and deeds of the men which gave meaning to the Declaration.

We have a tendency to assume that once we have made the right sort of speeches and passed the proper kind of resolutions, nothing more needs to be done.

We have some lovely sets of words. But sometimes we seem not to know how to fit action to them. We can sign declarations of independence, but we don't stick around for Valley Forge and Saratoga.

There are plenty of good examples:

Within the last few years, Americans innumerable have voiced ringing declarations about the irony of permitting poverty to exist in a land of unrivaled plenty; about the need to wipe out city slums; about the criminal folly of allowing Americans to kill themselves on the highways; about the necessity to pressure our natural environment; about the unalienable right of all people to freedom, justice and opportunity.

But are we doing enough to translate any of these declarations into fact? We have talked and resolved and deplored and condemned — and the targets of our resolving and condemning still loom large and frightening.

We could take a hint from the men of 1776. They spoke their minds about the iniquity of Tyranny — and then, with their own hands, went out and delivered themselves from it.

The new beef

The Dean of Agriculture at Texas A&M sounded a warning to American cattlemen recently during the fifth annual California Livestock Symposium in Fresno. Their industry faces head-on competition with foreign counterparts who are greatly increasing their beef production because of swiftly rising demand in their countries. Dr. L. S. Pope said:

"Only our ability to increase productivity per animal unit to offset higher production costs, plus the continued output of a more desirable kind of beef, will permit prosperity and survival of America's No. 1 agricultural industry."

Encouragingly, at the same time came word, from two sources, of experiments in beef production that seem, hopefully to fill Dr. Pope's prescription.

The more unusual effort is that of Hillsborough cattleman DC. Basolo, Jr. After 15 years of hard work in Montana and more recently on ranches near Stockton and Santa Rosa, Basolo has proved that buffalo can be crossed with domestic cattle — something animal husbandrymen long said simply couldn't be done.

Not only has it happened, but the result is an animal whose meat is higher in protein, lower, lower in cholestrol and fat, and costs less to produce than regular beef. The hybrid's rate of growth is twice that of cattle, Basolo says; it takes less feed to produce pounds; it is less susceptible to disease. And its meat, he says tastes like beef really should.

The other development is the United States Department of Agriculture's recent blessing on the sale of bullock beef. This is quite a switch, and is susceptible to some pretty corny comment. But seriously, the beef shortage has created a new attitude on beef production, with more bullocks being raised for beef, instead of breeding.

What's your choice, Dr. Pope: beefsteak, bull steak or buffa-beef?

Re: Washington

"Washington is not a place to live in. The rents are high, the food is bad, the dust is disgusting and the morals are deplorable."

A commentary on the Washington of Watergate?

No. Back in 1865 Horace Greeley added his more famous words:

How to get on White House list

WASHINGTON — Getting on the White House enemy list has become the latest status symbol in Washington. I would have been disappointed if I hadn't made the list of top 20 enemies.

Rival politicians like Senators Ed Muskie and George McGovern used to be called opponents, not enemies. Celebrities like Gregory Peck and Bill Cosby, who have criticized President Nixon, used to be called critics, not enemies.

Now the White House lists them as "enemies," to be harassed through government investigations. Few private individuals can stand up against the awesome power of the federal government. No private bank account can match the bottomless vaults of the U.S. Treasury. No private staff can marshal the manpower available to the government.

Yet the White House, according to the memos flushed out by the Watergate investigation, was determined to use this government power to "get" or "screw" political opponents.

I became aware months ago that the White House was seeking to discredit and, if possible, to destroy me. I decided finally that the best defense was to lay out the facts in the open. "The word has gone out from the White House," I wrote on February 7, "to 'nail' Jack Anderson."

I named staff chief H. R. Haldeman as the White House official behind the move. I described "Haldeman's cold, calculated hostility towards the press" and quoted a White House source as saying Haldeman "has an absolutely evil attitude relative to the press."

Whitten's arrest

More specifically, I wrote that "the word was passed to the Justice Department to try to make a case against us." This led to the abortive arrest of my associate Les Whitten. A federal grand jury, however, refused to indict him, and the Justice Department was forced to drop the charges.

White House press spokesman Ron Zeigler, with an unusual show of emotion, described as "wrong! wrong! wrong!" my charge that Haldeman was trying to nail us. Now the enemy lists and ugly memos out of the White House portray the true attitude of the men formerly around President Nixon.

It is also worth examining how I wound up on the White House enemy list. A review of my past columns shows I wrote dozens of favorable stories about President Nixon. I reported, for example, that he had evidence the Democrats had stuffed the ballot boxes in Illinois, Missouri and Texas in the 1960 election. Yet he turned down partisan appeals that he use the evidence to overturn the election results, saying "I damn well will not be a party to creating (a constitutional crisis) just to become President."

I told how he had paid all the college expenses of two black students without their knowledge, how as a college student himself he had waited each evening for a crippled classmate to help him up the stairs of their boarding house.

From sources who had gone to the Moscow summit meeting with Nixon, I wrote how he had broken the impasse over disarmament by leaning forward and telling Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev bluntly: "Dammit, let's settle it."

What landed me on the enemy list, apparently, was my access to unauthorized information embarrassing to the Nixon Administration. In early 1971, the White House analyzed my columns carefully for three months.

Haldeman's memo

A confidential report to Haldeman acknowledged: "Anderson does, indeed, have access to intelligence digests, and he proves it on a daily basis. It also appears his reference to private Presidential memoranda is valid, most likely when such material leaves the White House and is circulated on an agency level.

"On more than one occasion, examination of a Presidential quote in context indicates strongly that the leak came not from within the White House, but from the agency concerned with the subject matter.

"Anderson's comment regarding 'some of the transcripts of confidential minutes' possibly refers to verbatim quotes of comments made at White House leadership meetings . . ."

It was suggested that "an overt firing of a person directly connected with a leak would go a long way towards making the ability of the Andersons of the world to gain White House information both difficult and hazardous."

Limiting campaign funds unhealthy

Various contrivances being fashioned under the label "election reform" should carry the addendum, "Warning: This device may be injurious to your health and welfare."

Popular election reform today features restrictions on campaign contributions and spending. Various proposals also strive to tighten reporting requirements of receipts and expenditures.

There is a vast difference in the two procedures. Disclosure of receipts and expenditures can only work in the public interest, for it is the knowledge of what has been received and how it was spent that helps voters decide whether a candidate or an issue will get their vote.

Overly restricting campaign spending and contributions will work against the public interest.

It is a demonstrable fact that a candidate, or supporters or opponents of various issues, must spend a predictable sum of money to present their views to the electorate. If they are denied that opportunity, then the public will not learn the issues as a candidate sees them, or the points of view as those interested in ballot issues see them.

The public will get the story as the media sees the subject, if indeed the media considers the subject worthy of coverage at all. There are a great number of contests for office and ballot campaigns that are covered far too lightly for anyone to make an informed judgment.

Another problem, of course, is that the well organized groups — labor, chambers of commerce, teachers' associations, etc. — can tell the story through their membership resources, but the unorganized individuals who simply want to group together for a given campaign could not forge the resources to tell their story.

The end result, of course, is that office holders will gain a greater advantage in most campaigns due to their incumbency and the public will be less well informed than it is at present.

When it comes to bond issues for public interest items such as parks and transit and airports and museums and playgrounds there won't be the money to tell the story.

In both events the individuals of the state and the state as a whole are the losers.

The answer to election reform is not curbing campaign contributions, but getting them out in the open where people can see who is for or against what. The more encouragement people are given to contribute, the greater their participation in government.

Questions council action

The "New Look," as promised by the new mayor, Ray Lepire, has caused a great many voters to look anew at their decisions in the past election. Indeed, the actions of the council on June 25 convinced many that a "new" look is not always a better appearance. It is also the judgment of many that the "new" council has set back the progressive efforts of innumerable concerned citizens and groups at least ten years.

With limited funds, earmarked for all citizens of our city, the council decided to spend such dollars for limited, ethnic, special interest groups, thusly depriving all citizens of benefit. Brown, black and Anglo alike would have benefitted from the Pomona based, city established groups which were rejected. Yet over 15 per cent of the total funds were allocated to a group from East Los Angeles to permit them to possibly develop an activity in our city.

I can understand Councilman Ochoa ramming this sort of decision through, as had it been given consideration by the voters, the turmoil would have been beyond belief. Innumerable families, minority as well as majority, are now going to be deprived of much needed services to satisfy a very vocal and limited minority. Is this the "representation of all of the people of the city" promised in a campaign? Obviously not!

There are those who make it a practice to call "bigotry" whenever one takes issue with some action which benefits solely a limited segment of our city and, if this be their desire, so be it. Yet every group which was rejected drew no lines as to color or ancestry, and those accepted, by their makeup and title alone, prove otherwise.

I wish to thank the mayor and the council for the "new" look, but, for myself, I cannot help but kick myself for ever having questioned the look we lost. — T.E. O'Donohue, Pomona.

Gossip for today

The rules for achieving success are ever subject to change. And so it is that in today's fast moving world the wise man is seen but seldom heard, for he can never be certain that his conversation isn't being bugged. Furthermore, he carefully refrains from putting his best foot forward. It is much more important to keep it at ready reserve in order to be able to effectively kick anyone in the behind who may get in the way. But most important of all, he makes absolutely certain that he does it unto others before they do it unto him.

In this land of golden opportunity few goals are impossible for the young fellow who sets his sights high and adheres to those simple basic rules. — Maybe he won't become President but at the very least he can expect to achieve the rank of a Presidential administrative assistant or even a super aid and chief strategist.

INSIDE REPORT

Nixon's problem with Hugh Scott

WASHINGTON — The rapid deterioration of relations between the White House and the Senate Republican leader, Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, radically accelerated by the Watergate scandal, hit a new low when Scott spoiled administration efforts to delay passage of a gutted military foreign aid bill.

In the poisonously anti-Nixon, isolationist mood prevailing in the Senate, the bill was cut to shreds. Aid to South Vietnam was severely restricted, reflecting the view of prominent Democratic Senators that President Thieu's regime should be abandoned. No help was coming from President Nixon across the continent ("sulking on the beach at San Clemente," in the disillusioned phrase of one supporter).

Given this situation, administration strategists figured the only possible course was to postpone the vote beyond June 30. That would provide a higher level of military aid temporarily and also buy time to improve aid to Vietnam. Accordingly, a meeting was scheduled for 2 p.m. Tuesday in the back room of Scott's minority leader's office just off the Senate floor to be attended by key pro-administration Senators and presidential aides. The subject: how best to achieve the delay.

Holding own meeting

While administration officials waited in Scott's outer office, 2 p.m. came and went. What they did not know was that Scott was holding his own unscheduled meeting at that moment in the Senate Republican cloakroom, a sacrosanct area barred to non-Senators. Scott told pro-administration Senators there was no point in delay. Without administration officials around to object, key Nixon backers agreed to go ahead.

The incident buttresses the widespread feeling, both in the Senate and the White House, that Scott is preparing to abandon the Nixon ship in the wreck of Watergate. Scott, a wily old political fox who can scent the trends, is moving toward charting his own course, developing his own legislative strategy and vastly enhancing his own power as White House power declines.

Although the White House depends on loyal Senators to manage specific legislation, they cannot interpose a pro-Nixon Senator between the White House and Scott as de facto Republican leader.

Early during the Nixon administration, Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas played that informal role as Nixon advocate, often in opposition to Scott. No more. Embittered by his humiliating experience as Republican national chairman, Dole tells fellow Senators that Mr. Nixon today commands only 19 to 25 sure votes in the 100-member Senate — the principal reason why Scott is charting his own course.

A footnote: Conservative Repulican congressmen — especially firebrand first-termers — are plotting to purge Rep. John Anderson of Illinois as GOP caucus chairman because he opposes Mr. Nixon's Indochina policy. Mentioned as successors are Reps. John Rhodes of Arizona, chairman of the House Republican Policy Committee, and Jack Edwards of Alabama. House Republican leaders (including Rhodes), while deploring Anderson's apostasy, are not inclined to support a divisive purge of him.

GOP shuns Watergate

Although Watergate dominated backroom conversation during last Tuesday's meeting of the executive committee of the Republican National Committee, the subject was regarded as so inflammatory that national chairman George Bush ordered it kept off the agenda.

Keeping it off the agenda, indeed, was the confidential advice from several members of the executive committee — including Clarke Reed, the astute Mississippi state chairman. Reed's perceptive though indirect criticism of President Nixon last month over Watergate got him in trouble with true-blue Nixon loyalists. He feared Tuesday that the executive committee could never agree on a Watergate position resulting in embarrassing publicity.

A footnote: Former White House political aide Harry Dent, now general counsel of the National Committee, strongly urged conservative backing for liberal Rep. William Steiger of Wisconsin, chairman of the party's new committee on reforming party rules and regulations. Steiger has been subjected to continuing hostility from Dent's southern allies, particularly Reed. So Dent informed the executive committee that Steiger "has gone out of his way" to accommodate conservative criticism of his reform operations.

'Don't get the bears drunk'

Russians, not animals, cause problems in zoo

By PETER J. SHAW

MOSCOW (UPI) — When you visit the Moscow zoo:

—Don't get the bears drunk.

—Don't set the lions on fire with your lighted cgarettes.

—Don't feed [illegible] to the penguins, roast beef to the camels or cabbage to the wolves.

All these indiscretions have been committed by visitors to the zoo, the newspaper Moskovsky Komsomolets complained recently.

Lauds fence

"One of humanity's happiest inventions is a fence," the newspaper said, but went on to lament that fences are seldom enough to protect the zoo's 3,000 [illegible] human thoughtlessness and cruelty.

"Two drunks were looking for the company of a third," the newspaper said. "Unsuccessful, they went into the zoo and found the company of a bear.

"The bear liked the port wine.

"But a bear is not a man, and if people don't know their limits, a bear doesn't know its, either."

The bear "got terribly drunk and was sick for a long time," Moskovsky Komsomolets said.

Set lion afire

The bear fared better than the lion whose coat caught fire when two teen-agers flipped burning cigarettes into its mane.

The newspaper said parents often encourage their children to abuse animals.

"Why isn't the tiger growling?" a child asks.

"I'll show him how it growls," says the parent and, with a long stick, pokes the tiger in the feet and nose.

On the cage, the newspaper said, is a sign: "Don't tease the animals."

Don't feed animals

At the camel pen a child asks: "What does it eat?"

The parent replied "everything" and proceeds to throw the camel a piece of roast beef.

Too much of that, the newspaper said, and the camel will get a stomach ulcer.

"The zoo furnishes adequate food and if an animal eats too much, it gets sick," Moskovsky Komsomolets said, "but this doesn't deter visitors."

Tips on child-rearing

Workers clearing out the seal pond recover empty bottles, orange peels, pencils and ball point pens.

"Can anyone seriously think that seals eat ball point pens?" the newspaper asked.

The article ended with a small treatise on child-rearing:

"If your son steps on the tail of a cat, binds a dog to a post and throws rocks at it, feeds pins to pigeons or gives [illegible] out think this is a mere prank."

Libertarian Party to meet

SAN MARINO —Ed Clark, a corporate lawyer and chairman of the Libertarian party of California, will be the featured speaker at a picnic in Lacy Park here today.

Clark will speak on "The True Meaning of Independence Now."

The event at 1 p.m. is sponsored by the Libertarian Party, and is open to the public. Interested persons must furnish their own food for the picnic.

Victorian Gallery

Antique show planned at Plaza

MONTCLAIR — The third annual antique show will be held at the Montclair Plaza Thursday through Sunday, featuring tintype portraits of the Victorian Phogographique Gallery.

More than two dozen dealers will take part in the show which focuses on 19th Century America.

At a central location near the mall clock, a simulated photo sutdio of the 1880s will be in operation. Shoppers can pose for the familiar gray-tinted, stiffy posed daguerreotype photographs as a bustled lady of fashion, a Confederate or Union officer, an early fireman or police officer or a sunbonneted plainswoman.

Recently featured nationwide on NBC television, Victorian Photographique Gallery is now touring shopping malls and movieland celebrity parties with its "Portraits from the Past."

Through the combination of modern photograpny and an antique technique born in a storefront in Calico Ghost Town, the simulated tintype photograph is caputured and ready in minutes. The result is mounted in an old-fashioned frame of red and gold.

Victorian Photgraphiqhe Gallery and the display of a wide range of antique furniture, kitchen items, glass, pewter and collectibles will remain at Montclair Plaza through Sunday.

White man's justice not for the Sioux

By DONALD FINLEY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ninety-seven years ago Lt. Col. George Armstrong Custer made his last stand.

The Civil War hero and all 261 officers and men of his 7th U.S. Cavalry Regiment were wiped out by Sioux and Cheyenne warriors under Chiefs Sitting Bull and Crazy Horse at the Little Bighorn River in Montana Territory on June 25, 1876.

The battle, one of the U.S. Army's most ignominious defeats, stemmed from violations of Indian treaty agreements by white men and the federal government after gold was discovered in South Dakota's Black Hills on lands that an 1868 treaty had set aside for the sole use of the Sioux.

Enraged by Custer's defeat, the government ignored the 1868 treaty and took the Black Hills and other big slices of land from the Sioux, who were relegated to smaller reservations on less desirable lands in South Dakota.

Case still pending

Fifty years ago, descendants of the Sioux warriors who had annihilated Custer's force began trying to get what they felt was due them through the white man's judicial system — either to get the land back (even they admit that effort is unrealistic) or to get adequate compensation for it.

But, after 80 years, the Sioux case still is pending before the Indian Claims Commission (ICC).

Impatience with such delays and smouldering rage at the white man's treatment of Indians through the years were among the reasons leaders of the militant American Indian Movement (AIM) seized the South Dakota hamlet of Wounded Knee on Feb. 27 and held it for three months. Wounded Knee was the site of the last massacre of Indians by U.S. troops in 1890, a battle that effectively ended Indian resistance to the reservation system.

AIM's demands included reflectively than the 50-year legal cognition of Indians as a sovereign nation, enforcement of the 1868 treaty, and return of the Sioux land.

Although the tribal leadership discounted AIM as a bunch of radical urban Indians, the Wounded Knee takeover and the seizure late last year of the Bureau of Indian Affairs in Washington by AIM brought the Indians' plight to the attention of the nation and the world more effectively than the 50year legal struggle.

One of scores

The Sioux case, being handled by Washington attorney Marvin J. Sonosky, is only one of scores of Indian claims being pressed before the ICC, federal and state courts and legislative bodies. They are based on claims of broken treaties, broken agreements, broken laws.

But the Sioux case probably is the most dramatic, if for no other reasons than its connection with Custer's Last Stand, and for the size of the claim — more than 35-million acres.

The Indians had been giving way to the settlers from Europe since the Pilgrims landed, sometimes quietly, sometimes in treaties, often only in battle. Many tribes were exterminated as the white man demanded more and more land.

But the Western Plains Indians, especially the Sioux, presented the toughest problem for the white man. Tough, fierce and proud, they fought savagely in the bloody Indian wars between 1860 and 1890.

Discovery of gold in California in 1849 led to the Treaty of Ft. Laramie in 1851 with the Sioux and other tribes, defining the Indian lands and granting whites the right of passage.

In 1861, gold was discovered in Montana, bringing a tide of white movement through Sioux country which resulted in the bloody Powder River War with the Indians.

This was followed by the 1868 Sioux Treaty under which the United States recognized the Great Sioux Reservation as embracing all of South Dakota west of the Missouri River. It also acknowledged the right of the Sioux to use —but not permanently inhabit —an area about twice that size, to the west, south and north of the reservation. The Sioux granted rights of passage by whites through this territory.

The reservation, which the treaty "set apart for the absolute and undisturbed use and occupation" of the Sioux, included the Black Hills of South Dakota, a sacred place the Sioux called Paha-Sapa.

But when gold was found in those hills, the government moved to persuade the Sioux to cede Paha-Sapa to the United States. When the Indians refused, the government began what Sonosky terms a "Deliberate program to force the Sioux to sell the Black Hills."

Unable to persuade Congress to cut off the Sioux' $1.25 million annual ration allotment, President Ulysses S. Grant and Interior Secretary Zachariah Chandler issued orders Dec. 3, 1875, requiring all Sioux to be back on the reservation by Jan. 31, 1876. Otherwise, they would be considered "hostiles" and subject to being shot on sight.

But it was a terrible winter on the plains, and the messenger sent to notify the Sioux, who were hunting buffalo in the Powder River Country of Wyoming, didn't get back to Sioux territory until Feb. 11.

It was impossible for the Sioux, their women and children to meet the Jan. 31 deadline —even if had they wanted to. And they really didn't want to, because they considered this order a violation of the 1868 treaty that gave them the right to hunt in the Powder River Country.

Chandler turned the matter over to the Army on Feb. 1 and Gen. Philip Sheridan began preparations to force the "hostiles" back onto the reservation, where hunting was poor.

In June, Army forces began converging on the main Sioux and Cheyenne encampment in Montana Territory. Custer was sent ahead with his 7th Cavalry regiment, but Brig. Gen. Alfred Terry ordered him not to attack until the main body of troops was in place.

Custer disobeyed these orders. When he came upon the Sioux, he split his 675-man command into three groups and ordered an attack, confident of victory and glory.

But the Indians had several thousand warriors in the area, not the few hundred Custer expected. Custer and the five companies of troops he led were surrounded and wiped out. The only survivor was an Army horse named Comanche.

The other two groups he had split off also suffered heavy casualties, but their remnants managed to hold out until a relief column arrived.

To cut off rations

News of Custer's defeat reached Washington July 5, during the 100th anniversary celebration of the Declaration of Independence. Congress immediately voted to cut off Sioux rations unless the Indians agreed to sell the Black Hills and all other lands outside their reservation.

The 1868 treaty stipulated that any disposal of the Sioux lands would have to be signed by three-fourths of the male adult Indians. Even when armed with the "sell or starve" mandate from Congress, the government could get the signatures of only 10 per cent.

Ignoring this, Congress voted Feb. 28, 1877, to take the Black Hills and the Sioux hunting grounds from the Indians. Part of the Great Sioux Reservation itself also was taken later.

Sonosky said the Sioux for many years sought redress from Congress, but federal law barred Indian tribes from bringing suit against the government. Tribes also were not permitted to make contracts with lawyers to represent them on claims unless the contracts were approved by

Whites fight ruling

Indian victories in court fade

DETROIT (UPI) — Indians in a few states — chiefly Michigan and Wisconsin — recently won significant court decisions renewing century-old treaty rights to hunt and fish without restriction.

But in every case angry white sportsmen have fought the decisions in attempts to force court modifications or to find administrative loopholes that would restrict the Indians' hunting and fishing activities.

In Michigan, what Indians had believed was a monumental victory giving them the right to hunt and fish anytime and almost anywhere in the state quickly turned into an empty catch.

The Michigan Supreme Court ruled in April 1971, that the state had no authority to enforce game and fish laws against the Chippewa Indians living long the Keweenaw Bay in the western Upper Peninsula.

The court said the Chippewas treaty of 1854 with the pewas treaty of 1854 with the U.S. government clearly gave the Indians not only the right to fish and hunt freely on their reservation but on all land ceded to the government. The court further stated that only the President could rescind that right

The Michigan United Conservation Clubs (MUCC), representing white sportsmen, reacted forcefully, charging that Indian fishermen would deplete the Great Lakes of fish.

With pressure from the MUCC and the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, state Attorney General Frank J. Kelley retreated from an initial interpretation that applied the April decision to all Michigan Chippewas. And the court followed with a modification restricting its ruling to the small band of Chippewas on the Keweenaw Bay.

Several Chippewas from the Bay Mills Chippewa Reservation on Whitefish Bay in the eastern Upper Peninsula were arrested shortly after and lower courts ruled against them, fining them for violating fish regulations.

Donald Parrish, president of the Bay Mills band, complains bitterly about the sudden reversal of attitude by the court and by state officials.

After more than a year of pressuring, the Bay Mills Chippewas forced the U.S. Departments of Justice and Interior to challenge the state's authority in federal court. The government prosecutor has promised a "vigorous" fight on behalf of the Indians.

"I think we'll get a fair shake there," Parrish said. "If they rule against us, we'll go along with it."

"I do not think we can ever get a fair shake out of a state court again. We had our fishing and hunting rights when the (state) Supreme Court ruled.

"But the attorney general was running for the U.S. Senate against Robert Griffin and when he knew thousands of sportsmen were against us, he wasn't about to give us anything."

Bay Mills, one of the nation's smallest reservations with 340 Indians, originally was established as a "fishing village," but now "nobody gets fish," Parrish said.

The Chippewas of northern Wisconsin have fared somewhat better in their court battles.

About a year after the Michigan ruling the Wisconsin Supreme Court held that the Red Cliff Chippewas could fish freely under the 1854 treaty anywhere in Lake Superior.

The court said, however, that the Indians must use the same methods used by their ancestors when the treaty was signed more than 100 years ago. Red Cliff tribesmen, nonetheless, began fishing commercially.

The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources, like its Michigan counterpart, sided with white sportsmen.

The department thought it found a loophole and declared that while the Indians might be able to fish freely, they could not sell the fish off the reservation. The action effectively limited catches to table use.

A county court overruled this administrative interpretation, and the Chippewas resumed selling their catches to a wholesaler. An appeal is expected from the state.

Builder heads Pitzer board

CLAREMONT — Eli Broad, chairman of the board of Kaufman and Broad Building Co., Los Angeles, has been elected chairman of the Pitzer College Board of Trustees.

He succeeds Howard D. Williams of West Los Angeles.

Broad has been a trustee for two years and vice chairman of the board for one year. In addition, he has been active in college affairs, including the formation of the college's support group The Alliance.

At the same annual meeting, Harold S. Meicher, president of Trenton Foods, a division of Carnation Co., Kansas City, Mo., was elected to the board. He also is a patron in The Alliance.

Student leaders given own day

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — President Nixon Monday declared Nov. 14 National Student Government Day.

" ... Our schools should be not only centers of learning, but also laboratories for democracy," the President's proclamation said. "Student councils and similiar organizations ... are helping to teach the basic skills of citizenship, and to develop the qualities of leadership in the young people who take part."

Sioux Indian claims

the Interior secretary and the Indian Affairs commissioner.

"Since the grievances of the Indians were grievances against the very officers who had to approve their contracts," Sonosky said, "the Indians were effectively deprived by this statute of one of the most basic rights known to Anglo-Saxon law —the right to free choice of counsel for the redress of injuries."

Sioux case filed

Finally, in 1920, Congress passed a special statute allowing the Sioux to sue in the Court of Claims, which handles suits against the government. The Sioux case was filed in 1923, but it was dismissed in 1942 for lack of jurisdiction.

Congress created the Indians Claim Commission (ICC) in 1946 to hear Indian claims that had accrued prior to that date. The Sioux refiled their claim in 1950, but the ICC dismissed it in 1954 and the Court of Claims affirmed the dismissal. Sonosky said he became the Sioux attorney at this point and that after he filed new motions, the Court of Claims reversed itself in 1958 and returned the case to the ICC for further hearings.

The ICC immediately recognized the 7.3 million acres of Black Hills country as having been Sioux land in 1876, and after hearings the ICC decided that 48.14 million acres of additional land east and west of the Missouri River outside the Great Sioux Reservation also belonged to the Sioux.

Still pending are rulings on the value of all this land at the time it was taken from the Indians nearly 100 years ago. The Sioux claim the land value was $80.5 million, but the government said it was worth only $16.7 million. Under existing legal precedents, the Sioux would be entitled only to what the land was worth then, not what it is worth now.

But Sonosky said he fears a final judgment still is years away.

"The Sioux claim is probably one of the oldest, if not the oldest, pending litigation in the United States," he said.

"Generations of Sioux have passed since this claim was first brought to the courts in 1923. The end is not yet in sight. Delay should not be the object of justice. Justice delayed is injustice."

NATO allies still suspicious over new U.S.-Soviet detente

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The peace potions brewed by President Nixon and Soviet Communist Party Chief Leonid Brezhnev are generally regarded in most world capitals as good medicine for the international jitters. But some of the patients are showing signs of distressing "side effects."

France, like some of the other NATO allies, is highly suspicious of what Nixon and Brezhnev may have agreed to behind the scenes.

Nixon and Secretary of State William P. Rogers have repeatedly assured the NATO allies that the United States will not allow its eagerness to improve relations with the Kremlin to lead it into making arrangements detrimental to its friends.

The French have been most vocal about the danger of the two superpowers somehow making a deal to share the task of running the world. Whether Brezhnev, during his Paris visit, has succeeded in disabusing French officials of this notion is not at all certain.

It is a difficult suspicion to deal with, according to U.S. officials, because none of those who complain has specified exactly what is feared.

The uneasiness of some countries undoubtedly was intensified by the agreement on "Prevention of Nuclear War," which Nixon and Brezhnev signed. In this rather curious document, each of the two big powers promises not to use force or the threat of force against the other —an obligation which seems to have been covered 28 years ago when both signed the United Nations Charter.

The agreement went on, however, to provide that Moscow and Washington would hold "urgent consultations" if the actions of any two nations anywhere threatened to erupt in conflict which might bring on a nuclear confrontation between Russia and the United States.

This vague undertaking looked to some nervous foreigners like the beginning of a Soviet-American agreement to use their combined influence and force to police the world and impose agreed solutions.

U.S. officials say this is nonsense. They assert that the real problem, as Moscow and Washington appear to be defusing some of the more explosive issues, is that the NATO allies and the American public will be tempted to lower their guard prematurely.

They are concerned that:

—Congress and the American public now will be more inclined to support proposals to bring home some or all of the approximately 300,000 U.S. military men in Europe, most of whom are in Germany.

—The NATO allies, foreseeing an era of decreased tension in Europe and focusing increasingly on matters of trade and finance, will be even more reluctant than usual to fulfill their financial and manpower commitments to NATO.

The Nixon administration argues that maintenance of a strong allied front in Europe has been a major factor in pursuading the Kremlin to seek peaceful accommodations with the West. They also are convinced that Nixon could not have achieved his diplomatic breakthrough in Peking if it had not been for China's respect for U.S. determination to keep its commitments in Southeast Asia.

However, these are the same U.S. officials who have always argued that the Kremlin's primary objective in Europe was to secure the dissolution of the NATO alliance. Whether Nixon can thwart this objective without endangering his "era of negotiations" depends on whether Brezhnev's need for U.S. credits, equipment and technical knowhow is as great as the White House believes it is.

After a day spent on the river, it's beyond doubt that a number of amateur canoeists should be paddled.

Add raisins to items in short supply

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — Consumers may remember 1973 as the year of the shortage.

First it was heating fuel, then gasoline, then onions. Now shoppers can add raisins to items in short supply.

A severe frost in March, 1972 in central California—where about 50 per cent of the world's raisin supply is grown—plus bad weather in other raisin producing regions of the world cut supplies nearly in half and sent prices skyrocketing.

John Calder, general manager of the California Raisin Advisory Board, says the board's research indicates "there will be a virtual absence of raisins in the United States" during the months of September and October.

In addition to a shortage of regular packaged raisins, products containing raisins will be curtailed.

Baking industry spokesmen have indicated they may end the manufacture of raisin bread at least until supply catches up with demand, he said.

However, Calder said cereal manufacturers who use raisins are generally on better footing for their share because they buy in advance on long-term contracts.

The unseasonable frost cut production in this area from an average yield of about 220,000 tons to only 102,000 tons in 1972. Calder said other raisin growing areas abroad, such as Australia and South Africa, also suffered weather setbacks cutting into the supply.

As a result of the shortage, retail prices have climbed about 18 cents a pound to 57 cents, according to recent figures issued by the raisin board.

The shortage may be over when the new crop starts coming in about October, but Calder said that depends on contingencies yet to be determined.

"The grape crop is looking good this year," he said. "But we don't know what prices will be. They are bound to be high but the question is how high."

He explained that wine makers, who also can use Thompson seedless grapes grown here, are expanding their demand, and as a result many grape ranchers may sell to wineries rather than make raisins of their grapes.

If so, the shortage might continue.

When asked whether the raisin men may permanently lose some of their markets if a shortage combined with high prices continues, Calder said such a problem may arise.

"Our evidence thus far is that California raisins are of such a high quality we will always be able to get these markets back" through proper advertising and promotion, he said.

Bridge

A way to go wrong found

By Oswald & James Jacoby

July 4th is a trifle early to be showing the worst play of the 12 months, but we think we have it right here.

South was a bad player. North had just met him and while someone had told him that South had a faculty of playing the wrong card at every conceivable opportunity, North had no opportunity to see what South could do.

	NORTH ♠KJ976 ♥Q10 ♦KJ3 ♣A104	4
WEST ♠Q8 ♥2 ♦A97 ♣J987652		EAST ♠10543 ♥95 ♦Q106532 ♣3
	SOUTH (D) ♠A2 ♥AKJ87643 ♦4 ♣KQ

Opening lead—♣7

Anyway, in a rubber bridge game you take your partners as they come and North had managed to get vulnerable.

He was looking at a sound opening bid when he was delighted to hear his partner chirp, "Two hearts."

North went right into Blackwood and South responded five hearts to show two aces. Seven had disappeared into limbo, but six was there.

Should he bid six no-trump or six hearts? Maybe the trump ace was the one that was missing and South held the ace-queens of spades and diamonds and a long heart suit to the king-jack.

Not much of a two bid, but South wasn't much of a player.

How about six hearts? Nothing could touch that contract so North bid six hearts and sat back to watch the slam wheel in.

It didn't. South won the club lead with the queen and promptly laid down the king. East ruffed and led a diamond to his partner's ace.

At this point we stop to give North a prize as gentleman of all time. He said, "Sorry partner, I should have bid six no-trump."

Artificial liver unit developed

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — A 28-year-old physician-scientist Monday said he has developed the world's first artificial liver by harnessing the capabilities of living liver cells.

Dr. Kenneth N. Matsumura of the private Immunity Research Laboratory said development of an artificial liver had long been believed a near impossibility because, unlike the kidney and the heart, the liver has a variety of complex functions.

Liver failure is one of the most common causes of death. An estimated six to eight million Americans suffer from varying stages of progressive liver failure.

The liver not only detoxifies poisons and filters body waste products, but also synthesizes blood clotting proteins and plays a vital role in the metabolism of fats and sugars.

Matsumura said his book-size, several-pound invention, called an hepatic support device, is designed to be used outside the body, like an artificial kidney, processing blood from a patient and returning the treated blood.

Matsumura said he has put in nearly 10 years on research for the device. He has been granted a patent on it, clearing the way for clinical trials, he said.

He said all the technologies necessary to make the invention practical have been perfected and a small-scale production of the device was underway to supply researchers.

Matsumura, a graduate of the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco, started conducting medical research at the age of 14 and published his first professional paper at 19.

Salary hikes okayed for state workers

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The state Personnel Board Monday approved salary increases totaling $183 million for the state's civil service work force —an average 12.9 per cent hike per employe.

The board voted unanimous approval to the salary increase, in effect, a rubberstamp action of the allocation proposed by Gov. Ronald Reagan and endorsed by the legislature in the new state budget.

The increases, which will be reflected in July paychecks, ranged from 2.5 per cent for 82 civil servants to as high as 22.5 per cent for 50 others.

Most employes —64,032 of them—will get a 10 per cent raise, another 19,625 will get a 15 per cent increase; and 13,618 will be paid 12.5 per cent more in each paycheck.

Unaffected by the board's action were employes of the University of California and the California State University and Colleges system.

Nails on road snarls traffic

ALBANY (UPI) — Traffic on Interstate 80 was snarled for a half hour Monday when 10 cases of nails fell from a truck.

The California Highway Patrol said one big truck experienced eight flats when it passed over the nail-covered highway.

Reidy and Moynihan vows are exchanged

St. Joseph Catholic Church was the setting for the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Linda Moynihan and Edward Thomas Reidy III.

The noon ceremony was concelebrated by the Rev. Michael Roebert and the Rev. Norman Priebe.

The bride, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert F. Moynihan of Pomona, chose an empire-style gown of nylon fashioned with open-molded neckline, long fitted sleeves and a sweep train. A band of crystals and pearls outlined the neckline and cuffs. Her fingertip veil of French illusion was held by a headpiece of lace and pearls. She carried white roses, stephanotis, white pompons, small tangerine carnations and baby's breath. She was given in marriage by her father.

Miss Theresa Moynihan was her sister's maid of honor,and bridesmaids were Misses Joan Reidy, sister of the bridegroom; Linda Barbarite, San Francisco, and Barbara Jones of Pomona.

Patrick Reidy was his brother's best man. They are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Edard Thomas Reidy Jr., Kansas City, Mo. Ushers were Shawn Reidy, Jeffrey Moynihan and Richard Moynihan.

A reception was held at the Arbor Restaurant.

The couple honeymooned in Southern California before leaving for Chicago where Mr. Reidy will enter Loyola Dental School.

Among the guests at the wedding were the bridegroom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thomas Reidy Sr., Kansas City.

Buy dishwasher

When buying a dishwasher, look for: racks designed for ease and flexibility in loading; booster units for raising water temperature if necessary; automatic detergent and rinse agent dispensers.

Humidifiers

Look for these features in self-contained humidifiers: an automatic control to prevent unit from operating when empty; signal light to indicate low-water level; easily removed tank for cleaning.

Deodorizes

Clean and deodorize refrigerator inside and out with a solution of three tablespoons baking soda per quart of water. After cleaning, leave a box of soda, with top removed, in the refrigerator to absorb odoers as they occur.

Good cleaner

A solution of three tablespoons of baking soda in a gallon of water safely cleans painted walls and woodwork, even washable wallpaper. Especially good for the kitchen where grease stains are likely to occur.

Ask Dr. Brothers

Boy is miserable

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My wife and I have two children of our own but as foster parents we've also raised a number of other children. We've had as many as 10 children around our table and though we've had a number of problems typical of all families, we're usually quite happy. The last children who came into our home from a tragic, broken family have presented some problems new to us. For the first time in our life we've had a runaway. The boy left us two months ago and we've been trying to track him down ever since. We were sure he'd write, or in some way try to communicate with his two sisters who came to us at the same time, but he's made no gesture to do do.

My wife is heartsick about all this because she feels she's failed. I've accused myself of being too tough with the boy about his school work. It was hard for me because I couldn't reach him and he simply didn't give me the time or the chance to break through to him. His older sister feels that he's on drugs, or was on drugs when he left. My wife and I have spent so much time and money trying to get this boy back that I'm afraid the other children are suffering. My wife is still so preoccupied with this that it seems difficult for her to give the others the proper interest. I think she is reacting this way because her younger brother ran away and this may be bringing back sad memories. She seems to think it's all her fault.—M.L.

Dear M..L: There was probably very little either you or your wife would do to prevent this boy's leaving, especially if he was using drugs at the time.

Since you have raised so many children and you have had only this one problem, then it would be safe to guess that you are exceptionally good parents.

As I'm sure you know, many children entering foster homes have come from emotionally distraught backgrounds. They all need special love and care, which you must have given yours. It is impossible for any parent, no matter now nearly perfect, to be able to heal all the old emotional scars of a child.

Two psychiatrists, Donald Haupt and David Offord, studied the case histories of 29 runaway children and found that most had had very disturbing early lives. More than half had been in at least one foster home, and on the average, they had experienced more than four guardianship changes. These children were rated according to what the psychiatrists referred to as "hardship scores" or the total sorrow each child had known. Extreme poverty, physical abuse, low I.Q., and the number of guardianship changes all contributed to this score. They concluded that, mainly, it is misery that prods the runaway.

Runaway males had experienced far more hardships than boys who had not run away. Curiously, the opposite was true of girls. A girl who has suffered from years of hardship and maltreatment is more apt to stay home, perhaps because she fears that treatment in the outside world might be even worse.

Boys are more apt to run away in fall or winter, while girls are more apt to leave in the spring and summer. The doctors observed that a child of either sex who runs away in the expected season may be only "gesturing," trying to prove some point, or trying to get back at his parents for something he feels they should have done.

LET'S ASK THE COOK

by Nan Wiley

DEAR NAN:

I am glad to have your booklet "Allergy Recipe Sampler." I, too, am allergic to wheat and it is a hard thing to gather such recipes. I have been experimenting for quite a while and find that many recipes turn out good using rye flour if you use ½ cup quick-cook oatmeal also, then put a teasp. of cinnamon or other spices in to cover up the rye taste.

I have not been able to make a good pie crust, though. Perhaps some of your readers have a recipe that does not use white or whole wheat flour. Here is a recipe for Mrs. Tally who also has trouble and can't eat food with wheat. I call them "Rye Happies." You will need: ½ cup rye flour, ½ cup quick-cook oatmeal, ¾ cup coarsely chopped walnuts, ½ tsp. salt, 1-3 cup cooking oil, ½ teasp. baking powder, 1 cup raw sugar or brown sugar, 1 tsp. vanilla, 2 eggs.

Grease well the bottom of a 9-inch square baking pan. Combine rye flour, oatmeal, salt, baking powder and walnuts. In a mixing bowl put oil, sugar, vanilla and eggs. Beat well until free from sugar lumps. Stir in dry ingredients. Add ½ teasp. cinnamon if you wish. Pour batter into prepared pan.

Bake 30 to 35 minutes. Let cool. Cut into squares. May be dusted with powdered sugar if desired. Mrs. Jorgen Jorgennon, Bellingham, Wash.

Thank you, Mrs. Jorgenson. You did not give me oven temperature, but I would suggest 325-350 until tests done. I am sure that some of our readers will come up with a pie crust recipe to help you.

Here is one taken from the book "Recipes for Allergics" by Billie Little, Vantage Press, N.Y. (check your library). You will need: 1½ cups Cellu Rye Flour, 4 tablesp. corn-free shortening, ½ tsp. salt 3 or 4 tablesp. water, 1 tsp. Cellu baking powder. Sift flour, salt and baking powder. Cut in shortening with 2 knives, using a cross motion, then add enough water to make a stiff dough. Roll lightly on a floured board, and roll out thin. Line pie pan, if for pastry shell, and bake about 10 to 15 minutes at 450 degrees F. or until well-browned. Recipe makes 1 crust. If top crust required, double recipe. Fill with your favorite fruit filling.

President to instruct Rebekahs

Mrs. Lynn Woltje, district deputy president of District 74, will offer instructions at the Thursday meeting of Valley Queen Rebekah Lodge.

The noble grand, Mrs. Edna Bottom, will preside at the quarterly birthday party for lodge members and Mrs. Frances Wilson will be in charge of refreshments.

The 8 p.m. program will be at the Grange Hall, 11667 S. Monte Vista Ave., Chino.

China traveling needs preparation

NEW YORK — If you're planning a trip to China, don't take your calorie counter along! There just don't seem to be any fat people there, even if more food is available than ever before.

You don't run into any auto-produced traffic jams either because cars are almost non-existent in the country where the bicycle is king of the road (over one million bikes just in Peking). Yes, most of the bikes have locks on them, since a loss to the owner would be serious; a bike costs three months' salary.

Karen Croft, 19, who is of Chinese ancestry and recently spent 23 days in China, reports some of her other observations in the July issue of "Seventeen" Magazine:

—Bring along all the cosmetics you'll need. Almost no one, except actresses wears makeup.

—The hair revolution is one that passed China by. Girls almost never wear their hair below shoulder length and if it is long, they braid it.

—Even though most Chinese lock their bikes, the crime rate in China as compared to the United States, is almost non-existent. So if you lose something, it will probably be turned in to the nearest police station.

While the Chinese don't have the problems of auto-produced smog, some of their cities are infested with smoke and dirt from heavy industry. However, people see economic and technological growth as their main priority now which may account for their seeming indifference to the effects of pollution.

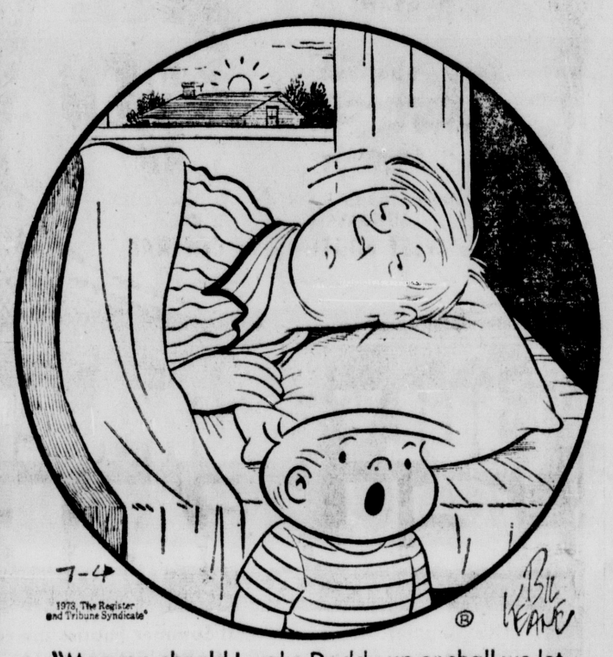

But they are careful with solid waste. Children work on recycling projects such as salvaging the cork out of bottle caps. The shavings from ivory carving factories end up in herbal medicines and stores wrap purchases in paper that had been used at least once before. Outside the cities, all uneaten food is given to pigs, rather than thrown out and sewerage is used for fertilizer.

If you're a pet fancier, the only place you're likely to see any is in a zoo. No one in China owns pets, which are considered unnecessary luxuries and wasteful of food that can better feed people. As an historical footnote, during the struggle for liberation in 1946, many people ate dogs and cats to avoid starvation as well as the bark off trees.

But today food is plentiful both in public restaurants and stores. Miss Croft reports that restaurants in Nanking, Shanghai and Canton were crowded with Chinese. The price of food has been stable for the past 18 years and you can get a five-course meal for three people for about eight dollars.

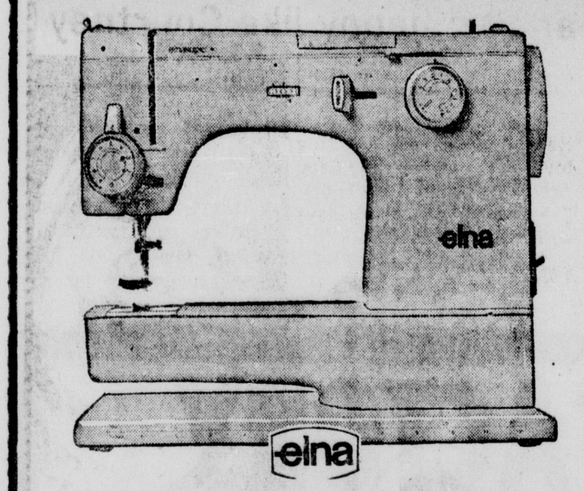

Women's Lib, at least in the job area, has been enforced in China for years.

Hears ugly words

"DEAR MISS VANDERBILT: I am appalled by the ugly words I hear on the street, in public transportation in films that are supposed to be for general audiences. Many children mouth obscenities. Business correspondence no longer has style. Every greeting and farewell seems to be a cliche.

"A sign of the decline of the civilization is the destruction of its language. I am glad when you write columns that help to point out some of these things. — E.C., Albany, N.Y."

Here, from the Royal Bank of Canada's Monthly Letter (Vol. 54, No. 3), are comments on revising one's language.

"There are accepted good standards of every language, and the fact that a language is changing is not a good reason for abandoning the standards. In all change there must be an element of continuity. If that element of continuity is absent, you have not change but the destruction of one thing and the creation of another.

"One trend today is toward the use of ugly words. We can do quite well in expressing ourselves intelligently without the mean and unlovely words which some writers introduce in the name of liberty, frankness and progressiveness. A good writer put it this way: 'I try to watch the words I say, and keep them tender and sweet, for I never know from day to day which ones I'll have to eat.'

"The Wholesomeness of language is menaced not so much by the crude vulgarisms of the untaught, who are indefatigable in their search for gross, squalid and violent words, but by the blithe irresponsibility of the taught.

"Discipline as well as purposefulness plays a part in effective communication. Do not give in to the 'any word will do' mentality or scatter words as if you were shaking a floor mop. Use honest words, the sharpest you can find, to say what you mean. Choice of words by a writer deserves as great care as does the selection of a fly by the same man when he goes fishing or of a club when he is on the golf course."

If you would like a copy of this four-page newsletter send your request for Monthly Letter Vol. 54, No. 3 to the Royal Bank of Canada, Head Office, Dept. J, Montreal, Que., Canada.

"DEAR MISS VANDERBILT: Is there truly a 'lug' in 'luxury'? I am old, and so is my dictionary, but both of us say 'LUK-shu-ri.' In my day, the 'lug' came in on 'luxuriant,' 'lugurious,' but not 'luxury.' Every commentator (or maybe I should say 'common-tater') says 'LUGzury' which irritates me. Thank you for your enlightening column. — M. L., Nashville, Tenn."

"Lugzury" irritates me, too, and I was always taught to say "luxury" but I am sorry to say that both pronunciations now are accepted by Webster's. I would not, however, say "lugzury" for any reason.

Common Market may flounder on Europe inflation

By RICHARD LONGWORTH

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The Italian invasion of Abyssinia in 1935 presidented the League of Nations with a major external challenge. It flunked the test and in the course of time, died.

There are growing signs that European inflation, now accelerating from a canter to a gallop, may be to the Common Market what Abyssinia was to the League—a threat which it must conquer or collapse.

The reason, according to Common Market analysts here, is that inflation brings with it so much instability, controls and currency upsets that it could torpedo economic and monetary union among the nine Market nations. And the Market has targeted this economic and monetary union by 1980 as its next major achievement.

The Common Market Commission has warned that inflation is a "grave danger" to European unity. But when Market finance ministers met in Luxembourg June 28 they did no more than agree in principle on the need for each nation to meet inflation by restricting credit and the money supply.

No maximum set

The ministers did not even try to set a maximum acceptable rate of inflation — for good reason. In a similar meeting last year they said that inflation, then running at 7 per cent annually, must be cut back to 4 per cent. Since then it has gone up to 8 per cent and may hit 10 per cent by the end of this year.

All this is enough to make America's inflation rate—a dangerous 7 per cent—look almost stable by contrast.

"Prices are now rising at...two or three times the pace of a few years ago," Dr. Jelle Zijlstra, chairman of the Bank for International Settlements, said recently. "There is no particular reason why this process should not continue."

Zijlstra was referring to a snowball effect which could wreck the economies of the industrialized nations. Bankers explain that governments must print more money just to keep pace with inflation. But this extra money only increases demand and drives prices higher—and so the process feeds upon itself in a vicious circle.

Different villians

Businessmen, workers and consumers have different villains in the inflation drama. But there are a number of built-in reasons why the dragon will be tough—if not impossible — to slay.

First is the volatile, inflationary pool of some 100 billion "Eurodollars" stranded in Europe. The United States refuses to convert these now and probably will refuse to do so until world monetary reform is achieved. This reform appears at least two years away—probably longer.

Then there is the runaway inflation—50 to 100 per cent in the past year—in the cost of many raw materials and food. Middle eastern nations are talking now of pegging the price of their oil to an inflation indey, ensuring that the cost of this vital commodity will fuel Europes inflation as well as its factories. The U.S. soybean embargo is expected to thrust food prices still higher in Europe, where American soybeans are the chief feed for livestock.

Wages rise

Nearly one-third of all European workers already have cost of living clauses built into their salaries. In Belgium, for instance, when prices go up 5 per cent, so do wages.

This is one reason why wages in every Common Market country have risen at an average of 10 per cent or more since 1968.

Huge government spending is a key factor. But this spending goes mostly for social programs that are enshrined in law and ideology.

Returns military to cabinet

Allende picks 3 generals

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — President Salvador Allende has decided to name at least three generals to his cabinet, returning the military to the government after a four-months absence, political sources said Tuesday.

The political sources said Allende was convinced the military's return to the cabinet was necessary to help ensure peace in this troubled nation, shaken last week by an aborted military revolt.

Allende named two generals and an admiral to his cabinet at the end of a series of nationwide labor strikes last November. They resigned after the March elections.

The opposition-controlled congress convicted two members of the outgoing cabinet in impeachment proceedings, removing them from office. Impeachment moves are pending against two other ministers.

Meanwhile, a sixth member of the militant rightist Fatherland and Liberty movement sought political asylum in connection with last Friday's attack on the presidential palace by the rebel Second Armored Regiment, in which 22 persons were shot to death.

The government said Patricio Jarpa, the organization's youth director, had sought asylum in the Colombian Embassy. The movement's presidents previously sought asylum in the Ecuadorean Embassy.

If the Bogota and Quito governments grant asylum, the Allende regime would then be forced to decide on authorization of safe conducts for the group to leave Chile.

In another development, the army ended prepublication censorship of newspapers and magazines. However the army said it would "revise" the publications before distribution and suspend the appearance of any that violated emergency zone decrees.

The army assumed virtual control of the press and law enforcement in a series of emergency zone decrees last week that stopped short of martial law.

The chamber of deputies rejected 81-52 Monday night Allende's request for a 90-day nationwide state of seige, imposing martial law

Federal regulation of auto industry is 'here to stay'

DETROIT (UPI) — There have been complaints from automotive executives — both privately and in public—that Washington bureaucrats decide what cars will look like and how they will run.

Entrance of the federal government into building cars was a "traumatic intrusion," says one Washington bureaucrat who advises businessmen, both in the auto industry and elsewhere, to recognize that regulation is here to stay.

Eric O. Stork, deputy assistant administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency recently particpated in a three-day Environmental Activities Week seminar sponsored by General Motors. It was supposed to show that fighting between the automaker and the government has ended.

The theme was set by the chief executive of the giant corporation, Chairman Richard C. Gerstenberg, who said that only a few barriers of misunderstanding and suspicion remain. That theme was shattered a few hours later as GM president Edward N. Cole renewed a more familiar sound —one of shutdowns unless Congress rewrites the standards set in the Clean Air Act of 1970.

Stork, the EPA executive, discounted doomsday talk but told the auto executives they had better get used to federal regulations.

"The auto industry's reaction to the imposition of federal safety and emission control requirements was generally one of vigorous opposition. As public pressures for regulatory controls built up over several years, the auto industry frequently denied there was any problem at all," he said.

"And when regulations were finally imposed, and as they were made more strict, there were frequent industry predictions that the death nell of the auto industry was at hand," he added.

Stork also said it is an unrealistic expectation for automen to see federal regulation "as a bad dream, hoping they will soon awaken from the nightmare."

"The public will continue to demand that the government protect it from various hazards, and the government will continue to respond to these demands," said Stork. "In other words, regulation of the auto industry is here to stay. You might as well learn to live with it."

Pointing to commercial aviation and the food and drug industry as two areas which have adjusted to federal regulation, Stork said auto executives could take a hint from the men who control those industries.

"I speak from personal observation when I suggest that most executives in those industries appear to be more sophisticated when it comes to dealing with government than are many auto industry executives," Stork said.

"And why shouldn't they be" he added. "For in each of these industries at least two generations of executives have grown up in their jobs facing the need to deal with regulatory requirements right from the day they were hired."

Stork described three ways in which auto executives react to being regulated — pure outrage, the ostrich approach and realization that there may be a problem.

The first accomplishes nothing, he said, since regulatory officals always can put on the white hat, paint the opposition black as pitch and win the argument. The ostrich approach of ignoring the problem and hoping it will go away also doesn't work, said Stork, because the problems usually becomes bigger and more unmanageable.

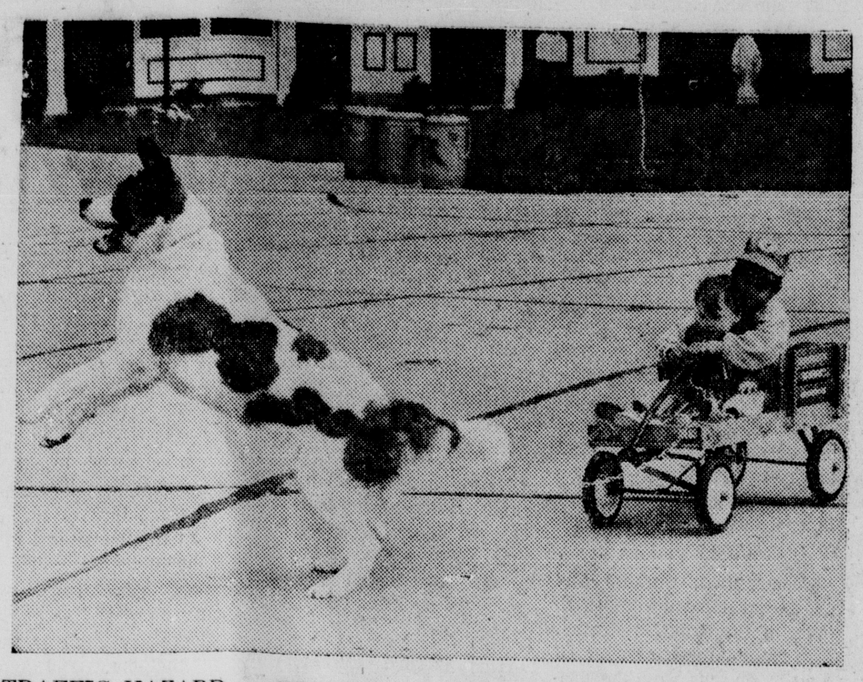

To its credit, said Stork, GM appears to be taking the third course—"recognition that there is a real problem to be solved by the new law, as well as an assumption that the people whose job it is to implement the law are probably about as honest, sincere and intelligent as anyone else."

"In this third strategy, the representatives of the affected company do everything that they can to help the government figure out how to get the job done in the best possible way," he said.

GM's recent about-face in which it now embraces the concept of the catalytic converter to control automotive emissions is an example of this strategy, said Stork adding that he's happy to see the change.

"It's been lonely being out in front," he said. "It's a nice feeling to have my technical staff supported by GM which had been saying it couldn't be done.

"It's like being the point man in an infantry squad in the field," he quipped. "You're mighty thankful when the rest of the group catches up."

Alcoholism and crime hit Soviet republic

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet Kirgizia is plagued with a rising crime rate, alcoholism, high absenteeism from work and illegal religious activity, the Communist Party leader of the republic said in a report published this week.

The newspaper Sovietskaya Kirgizia said party First Secretary T.U. Usubaliyev made the report at a meeting of party activists June 20.

Kirgizia is the southernmost Soviet republic bordering on China and has a population of about two million.

Usubaliyev's report, which filled an entire page in the newspaper, said:

—The crime rate is high and in some areas rising. Embezzlement is widespread despite the effort of authorities to crack down on it, and some embezzlers have built fine houses, bought cars and organized regular drinking bouts without anyone taking notice. The food industry and other consumer industries are ridden with petty theft. Some teachers and policemen have been engaging in bribery and extortion.

—Alcoholism is widespread, and 35 per cent of all crimes in the republic are due to drunkenness.

— Absenteeism cost the republic an estimated 20 million rubles (27.6 million) last year.

Commander of Pacific fleet will retire

HONOLULU UPI) — Adm. Bernard Clarey, commander in chief of the U.S. Pacific fleet will retire from the Navy on Sept. 30 and turn over his command to Adm. Maurice Weisner, now vice chief of naval operations in Washington.

The U.S. Pacific fleet, world's largest naval command, is headquartered at Pearl Harbor.

The fleet, deployed over a 94-million square-mile area, includes more than 60 shore commands, 280 ships, 2,000 aircraft and a quarter-million sailors and marines.

Clarey, commander of the fleet since December, 1970 is a native of Oskaloosa, Iowa, who served as a lieutenant on the submarine Dolphin in Dec. 7, 1941.

SNOW PEACHES

Keep cool at dessert time with this easy-to-make dessert. Select six or eight firm, ripe fresh peaches. Do not remove skins or pits, but cut peaches in half. Combine 1 cup of flour and ¼ cup of sugar. Stir in 1 cup carbonated lemon-lime drink. Dip peach halves in batter, covering them completely. Fry in deep cooking oil that has been heated to 375 degrees. When the peaches are crisp and lightly browned, drain them and dust with powdered sugar. This recipe makes 12 t o16 servings.

Get away from it all with camping

As our cities grow more and more congested, people are looking to the country for vacations and leisure time. Many Americans are discovering the joys of camping, whether an overnight trip or a week-long excursion, is a great way to "get away from it all" and enjoy the wonders of nature. Nothing beats the peaceful tranquility of sitting around a campfire after a full day in the outdoors.

Campers today need not rough it; there are so many conveniences available in the way of equipment and supplies to make camp life comfortable and inviting. The amount of equipment you buy will depend upon the length of your trip, the permanent facilities at your chosen camp site and of course your budget. Camping trips are quite reasonable, however, compared with the high cost of motels and restaurants today, and few vacations are more fun and rewarding for the whole family.

Nothing builds appetites like fresh air and exercise, so plan meals that are hearty and filling. Campfire Beans and Franks is an ideal supper dish that's easy to fix, yet "sticks to the ribs." Frankfurters, which can be stored in a refrigerator-chest for a day or two, combine with canned beans, tomatoes and seasonings for a tempting and flavorsome stew.

A helpful hint for disposing of an empty tin can is to remove both ends, then flatten in the middle. They take up much less space in your trash bag.

A grand accompaniment for this tasty dish is Hot Mexican Corn Bread. Made with corn meal, cheddar cheese and peppers, this zesty bread can be prepared at home, wrapped in foil and warmed over an open fire. Margarine, the modern spread, adds old-fashioned buttery flavor to this wholesome stew and hot corn bread, which are sure to satisfy the hungriest campers.

CAMPFIRE BEANS AND FRANKS

- ¼ cup (½ stick) margarine
- ½ cup chopped onion
- 2 cans (16-ounces each) vegetarian baked beans
- 1 can (16-ounce) tomatoes
- 6 frankfurters, sliced
- 2 tablespoons prepared mustard

Melt margarine in large saucepan. Add onion and saute over low heat until tender, about 5 minutes. Stir in beans, tomatoes, frankfurters and mustard. Heat through, stirring occasionally. Makes 6 servings.

HOT MEXICAN CORN BREAD

- 2 cups grated sharp Cheddar cheese
- 1 canned jalapeno pepper, seeded and finely chopped
- 1 cup yellow cornmeal
- 1 cup unsifted flour
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup (½ stick) softened margarine
- 1 cup milk
- 1 egg
- 1 can (12-ounce) vacuum-packed whole kernel corn, drained

Combine cheese and pepper in small bowl. Mix well; set aside.

Blend together cornmeal, flour, baking powder and salt in mixing bowl. Add margarine, milk and egg. Beat with rotary beater until smooth. Stir in corn. Pour ½ batter into a hot greased 9-inch skillet. Sprinkle on cheese and pepper. Pour on remaining batter, spreading mixture to cover cheese.

Bake at 400 degrees about 30 minutes, or until done. Remove from skillet and cool on wire rack. Wrap in foil when cool. To serve, place over hot coals until heated through. Makes 10 servings.

Cut food costs but not nutrition

Summer is no longer "just around the corner." It's here and here to stay for many weeks, and with it comes a pleasant relief in diet. Sandwiches, salads, cooling soups and delicate mousses take the place of heavier, hearty meaty meals. Dishes that are less time-consuming to make and far less costly.

And while every homemaker welcomes the relief that summertime fare gives to the weekly food budget, she knows she must not economize on the nutritional quality of the food she feeds her family. Swimming, boating, tennis and other summer activities require energy-giving foods, high in complete protein, while less in the calorie department.

Many convenience foods offer tempting and economical summer fare and one of these is canned salmon. From the standpoint of ease, versatility and nutrition it's hard to beat.

It's good just as it comes from the can, yet combines perfectly with other foods such as fresh vegetables, salad greens, fruit and dairy products. It obligingly lends not only its delicate flavor but its gay color to sandwiches, salads and any number of warm weather specials. It's brimming with vitamins and minerals too, and two half-pound cans or a one-pound can make delicious salad meals to serve 4. And that's hard to beat, too, for good economy.

Here are two of the many summertime economical meals found in a can of salmon that are so chockfull of good nutrition, you know you're feeding your family sensibly every time you open a can.

SALMON GRAPE SALAD

- 7¾-ounce can salmon
- ½ cup broken walnut meats
- 1 cup green seedless grapes
- ¼ cup chopped celery
- 4 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons salmon liquid from can
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper

Drain salmon, reserving liquid. Flake salmon. Combine with other ingredients. Chill thoroughly. Serve on a bed of crips lettuce or romaine with additional mayonnaise. Garnish with water cress. Serves 2.

SALMON SALAD PLATTER

- 1-pound can salmon, drained
- Romaine or crisp lettuce
- ¾ cup mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 cucumber, peeled
- 1 large tomato, peeled and cut into wedges
- 2 hard-cooked eggs, quartered
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- Salt and freshly ground pepper

Separate salmon into chunks and arrange in center of a platter lined with romaine leaves. Combine mayonnaise, lemon juice and mustard and spread over salmon. Slice cucumber thinly. Arrange cucumber slices, tomato wedges and egg quarters around salmon. Sprinkle with parsley and salt and pepper. Serves 4.

Shimmering, pretty salad

Gently fold drained canned cling peach slices, halved fresh strawberries and cubes of cream cheese into strawberry-flavored gelatin. Let gelatin partially set before adding fruits and cheese. Spoon into decorative molds and chill until firm. Add a few drops mint extract to mayonnaise for the dressing and top each salad with mint sprig.

Thuringer taste treat

Heat smoked thuringer and place on a hard roll. Top with sour cream mixed with a small amount of horse-radish and salad mustard.

Peanut butter satisfies the whole family

A p-nutty choco shake is the delicious result when the peanut butter fans join the ice cream fans in the kitchen. Using an electric mixer or blender they can whip together peanut butter, vanilla ice cream and chocolate syrup to make a triple-flavored shake that rivals the best from any old-fashioned ice cream parlor.

The extra thick shake is a fun way to fill part of the daily milk quota for both adults and children. Peanut butter adds important minerals, protein and food energy as well as a hint of peanutty good flavor.

Nibblers in the crowd will appreciate a plate of criss cross cookies served with the shake. They're the perennial peanut butter favorites made with either crunchy or smooth style peanut butter. Both the cookies and the shake are easy for young cooks to make with a little help. For extra special serving, the glasses can be chilled in the freezer to give a frosty appearance.

P-NUTTY CHOCO SHAKE

¼ cup peanut butter smooth or crunchy
1 tablespoon chocolate syrup
1 pint vanilla ice cream

Combine ingredients in electric mixer or blender, beating until smooth and thick. Add milk for thinner shakes. Pour into chilled glasses.

If desired, add another scoop of ice cream and top with a spoonful of peanut butter before serving.

CRISS CROSS COOKIES

1 cup peanut butter, smooth or crunchy
½ cup margarine
½ cup granulated sugar
½ cup packed brown sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 egg
1½ cups sifted flour
¾ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Cream together peanut butter, margarine and sugars until light and fluffy. Add vanilla and egg and beat well. Sift together flour, soda, baking powder and salt and add, mixing thoroughly. Chill dough. Shape into 1-inch balls and place about 2 inches apart on cooky sheet. Flatten with fork in criss-cross pattern. Bake at 375 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes.

Americans just love fruit pies

Americans love their fruit pies. One of the favorites inspired the song of long ago, "Can she bake a cherry pie, Billy Boy, Billy Boy?"

Spices are important in bringing out the special flavors of fruit pies. For example, mace or nutmeg add their subtleties to rhubarb, lemon, blueberry, pineapple, banana or berry pies. Both spices come from the same peach-like fruit of a tropical evergreen tree. Mace is the fibrous network that surrounds the pit or seed of the fruit we call nutmeg.

NUTMEG CHERRY PIE

1 can (1 pound red tart pitted cherries, packed in water
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons corn starch
1 teaspoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon butter or margarine
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
1 8-inch baked pastry shell
½ cup heavy cream, whipped

Drain cherries, reserving juice (approximately three-quarter cup). Set cherries aside. In a small saucepan combine cherry juice with sugar, cornstarch, lemon juice, nutmeg and salt. Blend well. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Stir in butter, vanilla extract and reserved cherries; cool. Turn into pie shell. Chill until firm. Garnish with whipped cream sprinkled with additional nutmeg, if desired. Makes one 8-inch pie.

No cause for tears in onion supplies

Onions, a distant relative of the fragrant lily, are being produced in the Stockton area now and are expected to last into July. The Stockton Yellows dominate the market and should reach their peak this week. They are noted as generally good. The yield this year is approximately one-third less than last year because of the wet winter, and this will result in higher prices than last year.

Earlier this year the price of onions attracted considerable attention. Prices were higher because of the severe winter and resulting limited supply. However, a decline in prices occurred in May as the Imperial Valley entered the onion picture with its sun-ripened commodity. Supply began to catch up with demand.

Yellow onions are now selling from 15 cents to 19 cents per pound in most markets, as opposed to 49 cents per pound during the shortage. Who said prices don't come down?

If demand for onions continues to increase, there will be no storage of these vegetables for the months of September through November, and the bulk of the onions shipped from Oregon and Idaho at that time will be higher priced.

The medium-sized onions are superior to small and jumbo sizes from the standpoint of price and quality. With barbecue season at its peak now these onions make an excellent added attraction to shish kabobs.

Some helpful hints for cutting onions — refrigerate a couple hours before cutting or peeling, and no more tears. To remove onion odors from hands, rub them with fresh lemon before washing.

Carrot Shift

As the Imperial Valley ends its carrot season, harvest is beginning in Salinas with supplies expected to last until fall. The demand for these nutritious vegetables is reported as good, and the quality also good.

Carrots in one-pound film bags are smaller in size, but sweet, tender and succulent. Unusually the loose carrots on display have been picked over by consumers early each day, while these bagged carrots sit by lusciously.

Bushy carrot tops may make the product look better, fresher, and feel like more for your money, but the tops can draw moisture from the vegetable itself, reducing its life and quality.

Green or yellow-colored plant foods are excellent sources of vitamin A. One raw medium-sized carrot supplies more than enough of the daily amount of vitamins, as recommended for the average person.

ORANGE CARROTS

1 pound carrots
¾ cup water
¾ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon fresh grated orange peel
1 orange
2 tablespoon margarine or butter
2 to 3 tablespoons of your favorite syrup (cane, molasses, honey, pancake, or brown sugar)

Wash and peel, scrub or scrape carrots. Slice crosswise into rounds or lengthwise into sticks. Bring water and salt to a boil in saucepan. Add carrots and cover pan. Cook over medium heat 10 to 20 minutes, until tender. Drain well. Meanwhile grate ½ teaspoon peel from orange. Peel orange and cut into bite-size pieces. Add orange pieces and peel, margarine and syrup to drained carrots. Place over low heat and stir gently until margarine is melted and oranges are heated. Serve at once.

For different flavor, leave out the syrup and add 1 to 2 tablespoons finely chopped green onions or chives.

Old English recipe is simplified

The old English recipe for fruit fools is still a classic way to use the fresh fruits of summer.

A 1741 recipe (from "The Family Magazine Containing Useful Directions in All the Branches of House-keeping and Cookery") describes the delights of this dessert:

"Take either currants, mulberries, raspberries or strawberries, sprinkle them with a little rose-water; press out the juice, and draw the milk out of the cow's udder into it; sweeten it with a little sugar, and beat it well with birchen twigs, till it froth up; then strew over it a little fine beaten cinnamon, and it will be an excellent mess."

Today, the recipe is simpler. You can use a variety of fresh fruits all summer long. But right now, you'll want to take advantage of the crisp California seedless grapes filling our markets. The grape crop forecast is excellent — almost a vintage season — and the popular seedless grapes should be available through October.

For our recipes today, as well as for refreshing out-of-hand snacking, you'll want to be sure to select plump, ripe grapes. Seedless grapes are so convenient, too — all you do is wash them under a gentle spray of water, pat dry with paper towels and they're ready to use.

Based on a velvety combination of sweetened grapes and whipped cream, our grape fool is simple and quick to prepare. Light, yet refreshing, it's a lovely way to end a summer meal.

For those of you who can't quite afford the luxury of whipped cream in your diet, try our variation on a "fool" theme — spiced Grape Compote. The idea is still the same, but a little less caloric. Remember though, a whole cupful of grapes is under a 100 calories. So, if our variation doesn't make your diet list either, just eat the grapes.

GRAPE FOOL

3 cups seedless grapes
½ cup sugar
Juice of half lemon
1 cup whipping cream, whipped

Combine grapes, ¼ cup of the sugar and lemon juice in saucepan. Cook (covered to steam) over low heat for 5 minutes. Crush grapes slightly. Chill. Just before serving, marble grape mixture into the whipped cream sweetened with the rest of the sugar. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

SPICED GRAPE COMPOTE

3 cups grapes
½ cup sugar
1 cup orange juice
3 cinnamon sticks

Combine ingredients in saucepan. Cook over low heat for 5 minutes. Serve warm or chilled. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Refresher for the kids

Shimmering fruit-filled gelatin makes a nutritious afternoon refresher for kids of all ages. Prepare your favorite flavored gelatin and chill until partially set. Whip lightly and fold in well drained fruit cocktail and miniature marshmallows. Chill until set. Serve in paper cups with wooden spoons for outdoor eating.

Eating habits based on convenience food ups costs

NEW YORK (UPI) Eating habits that depend increasingly on convenience foods including snacks, are partly responsible for the high cost of food served at home.

This is an inescapable conclusion based on the first quarter report of the National Menu Census, a study made every five years by the Market Research Corporation of America (MRCA).

The report covers July-September, 1972, but "we have found in past years that what you learn in the first quarter carries through, except for seasonal items," says Edgar Nelson, board chairman of MRCA.

In an interview, Nelson said he expects the pattern to continue, despite consumer complaints about spiraling food prices.

Trends sighted in the report include a 15 per cent increase in carried lunches, but Nelson thinks this is due as much to an increase in the working population as it is to economy-minded consumers.

Supporting the big spender theory is a 50 per cent increase in wine consumption over the same period five years ago; expanded consumption of frozen multiple-course dinners in smaller towns and areas and an increase in the number of households serving them, and no decline in household consumption of expensive beef cuts.

However, roast beef consumption was down eight per cent, he added, while ground beef consumption rose 30 per cent and fish, 12 per cent. The latter two could be tied to budgeting, but the growth also can be linked with what an associate of Nelson's termed a tremendous growth in sales of packaged dry mixes for making main dishes with ground meat or tuna.

Nelson said the most frequent users of frozen dinners are low-income, one-person households — presumably older and retired persons. He added that the group also includes some young, unmarried persons. He profiled the least frequent users as two-member farm households in the east-south-central region of the United States with an educational level of less than ninth grade.

He said the increase in wine serving was observed in lower income groups although the greatest growth was in upper income households.

The menu census, first made 20 years ago, tries to determine why people eat what they eat. Analyses of the information gathered in the census are sold to manufacturers for — among other things — guidance in developing new products and new uses for existing ones, planning advertising campaigns and tailoring products to specific markets.

The 4,000 households included in the census are chosen every five years from a national consumer panel of 7,500 households which have submitted weekly diaries of their food and beverage purchases. The smaller group submits daily forms showing not just what they cooked and served and what ingredients they used, but also whether the cooking was done in an oven of on a range-top, when meals were served, how many persons were present and how many were on a diet.

Predictably, many fall into the last category. The first quarter report showed that about 11 per cent of all males over 18 and almost 20 per cent of all females over 18 were on some form of diet—losing, gaining or maintaining weight.

Try to reconcile that finding, if you will, with a simultaneous boom in sales of high-calorie snack foods, such as fried corn and wheat products, mixed nuts, and fried onion rings.

Nelson said meal skipping is increasing but many snacks are served not at snack time but as part of a meal. Forty per cent of all corn chip products servings are in carried lunches.

Breakfast is the meal most often skipped, and the number one group of skippers consists of men and women 18-24 years old. The second most frequent breakfast skippers are the 33-44 year olds.

But midmorning snack incidence has increased only one per cent over five years ago, while afternoon snacks are up 10 per cent and evening ones, eight per cent.

At the same time, fewer regular main meals are being served. They represented 66 per cent of total meal serving occasions in 1967, but dropped to 63 per cent by 1972, while total snack serving occasions increased by six per cent during the same period.

Nelson said the heaviest users of commercial snacks are high income households, but households of five or more persons also use commercial snacks frequently.

Sauerkraut came from the Austrians

Another food legend weaves around the origin of sauerkraut. Actually the Austrians named this white cabbage dish that is fermented in salt, not the Germans. Supposedly the Austrians got the recipe from the Chinese by way of the Tartars. They soured the cabbage with winter rice wine and ate it with their rice. Later caraway and juniper berries were used to flavor the salted cabbage. Here is a version that combines apples and sauerkraut to make a cold salad that goes well with those summer barbecued meats.

SWEET 'N' SAUERKRAUT

2 cups drained sauerkraut
1 cup diced apple, unpeeled
¼ cup peanut oil
¼ cup chopped parsley
½ teaspoon caraway seed
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Combine sauerkraut, apple, peanut oil, chopped parsley, caraway seed, salt, and pepper. Chill until ready to serve. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Refreshing ice cubes

A frosty fruit-freeze will refresh warm weather appetites. Combine canned fruit cocktail and syrup with prepared lemonade. Pour into ice cube trays and freeze until firm. Pop 2 or more cubes into glasses of chilled ginger ale or whole fruit nectar. Youngsters love the fruit-filled cubes, to munch right out of hand. Provide plenty of paper napkins to catch the "drip."

Steak and potatoes taste good, even through a straw

By DUSTON HARVEY

MENLO PARK (UPI) — If you've been living on warm liquid gelatin, tea and broth, a meal of steak and potatoes tastes good —even if you have to sip it through a straw.

"It's tasty if you can't chew or eat otherwise," says Wilma King, who spent a year on a liquid diet after surgery on her jaw.

While recuperating from the bone graft at Stanford University Medical Center, she had to eat through a straw while her jaw was wired shut.

"I was starving on the tasteless hospital diet," Mrs. King recalled. "A little bit of tea and broth goes a long way. It will keep you alive, but not much else."

"When I got home, I decided I could whip up much better meals. I love to eat and decided to return to my regular diet — but through a straw."

The result was such blended delights as "steak shake," "apple pie drink," "liverwurst and cheese on rye," "chili dog," and "sausage and eggs."

Mrs. King, 52, a lab assistant in the Stanford Medical School genetic department for the past 15 years, decided to pass on her concoctions to others forced to live on a liquid diet for long periods.

The result is a 24-page cook book, titled "Blend and Mend" containing 48 recipes for breakfast, lunch, dinner, salads, sandwiches, dessert and beverages which can be eaten milkshake fashion.

She's sold about 500 of the 2,000 copies she had printed herself, most of them through doctors and hospitals, and has received dozens of letters of thanks from patients who went off tea and broth.

"You have to need this diet to appreciate it," Mrs. King admitted. "But people who have to use it thoroughly enjoy it. Most of them didn't realize they could still get solid food in their stomachs."

Mrs. King, who said the cookbook was the first for people who can't eat, included calorie counts with each menu to help patients who need to maintain their weight.

The fledgling author, who no longer needs the liquid diet although she is restricted to soft foods, said her favorite recipes were sausage, eggs and potatoes for breakfast and steak or roast beef for dinner.

Her menu for steak shake: Cut a three-ounce serving of broiled steak into small cubes, put into blender, and process for two cycles at chop. Add one-half cup mashed potatoes, one-half cup gravy and one cup warm milk. Process one cycle at mix, two cycles at blend, or until smooth.

Another suggested meal is liverwurst and cheese sandwich on rye: Put a slice of rye bread, broken into small pieces, a slice of liverwurst and two tablespoons of cream cheese into blender, process two cycles. Add one cup of milk and process two cycles at blend, or until creamy or smooth.

"That's very tasty," insisted Mrs. King. "You should try it with a beer sometime . . . if you can have beer."

The recipe book's final warning is to sippers whose doctors allow them alcoholic beverages.

"Sipping liquor through a straw can get you stoned very, very quickly," Mrs. King writes.

She also suggests that straw users get out of the house for meals.

"Cooks and waitresses in restaurants are the kindest people in the world," she says. "They'll blend things to your order and laugh with you —not at you —for your courage."

For a peach of a shake

Combine the makings of peach Melba in a luscious milk shake. Crush canned cling peach slices with a fork. Add raspberry syrup. Combine with vanilla ice cream and milk and whip in blender or with electric beater. Pour into chilled glasses.

Tangy glaze to top meats

Use a tangy, sweet-sour glaze for ham or meat loaf. Combine ¼ cup each sharp French or Russian dressing and syrup from canned cling peaches and a dash of mustard. Spoon over meat as it bakes. About 5 minutes before removing from oven, top loaf with canned cling peach slices and baste with glaze.

Salads in doldrums? try artichokes and avocados

Fruit and vegetable salads with their colorful combinations of lettuce, tomatoes and much more take on new dimensions with the use of artichokes and avocado. Artichokes and avocado, longtime favorites of families on the West Coast and in the islands, are becoming more popular throughout the country.

Although the artichoke looks a problem to eat, it really is tasty and quite easy ounce you get the hang of pulling off a leaf and biting off the end. The artichoke heart itself makes a complete salad, is good fried as in the Mediterranean or in combination.

ARTICHOKE JULIENNE SALAD WITH AVOCADO-CREAM

½ head iceberg lettuce
4 artichokes, prepared as directed, quartered and chilled
½ pound cooked ham, cut in strips
½ pound Swiss cheese, cut in strips
½ pint cherry tomatoes
¼ pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
½ cup sliced celery
1 small onion, sliced and separated into rings

Arrange lettuce leaves on a large serving platter. Place quartered artichokes around edge of platter. In large bowl, toss remaining ingredients together. Spoon into center of platter. Serve with Avocado-Cream Dressing. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

AVOCADO-CREAM DRESSING

1 medium size ripe avocado, peeled and pitted
1 cup (8 ounces) sour cream
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon basil leaves, finely chopped
⅛ teaspoon garlic powder
Dash pepper

Place all ingredients in container of electric blender. Blend until smooth. (Or use rotary beater.) Chill. Dressing will be thick. Serve as dressing for salad. May also be used as dip. Makes 2 cups.

ARTICHOKES WITH WINE-LEMON MAYONNAISE

1 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon vermouth or dry white wine
½ teaspoon grated lemon peel
½ teaspoon ground mace, or nutmeg

6 medium artichokes, prepared as directed
Parsley

Blend together mayonnaise, vermouth, lemon peel and mace. Spoon into hot or cold artichokes. Garnish with sprig of parsley. Makes 6 servings.

Camp cooking is a simple proposition

Camp cooking has changed with the times. Now most foods used for camp cookery are dehydrated, freeze-dried or canned. This includes the variety of potato products that save peeling time for the chef on duty. A variety of instant mashed flakes and buds, diced, shredded, or scalloped potatoes certainly make life more simple. Two dishes to try at the campsite are Clam and Egg Hash and Camper's Choucroute Garnie.

CLAM AND EGG HASH

- 1 package (12 ounce) dehydrated Idaho hashed brown potatoes
- ¼ cup each butter and oil
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 2 cans (7½ ounces each) minced clams, drained
- Salt and pepper
- 4 egg yolks
- 6 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
- ¼ cup freeze-dried chives
- 6 tablespoons evaporated milk

Cook potatoes according to package directions; drain well. Melt butter with oil in heavy skillet and cook onion. Mix potatoes with the clams; season. Press into the skillet with a spatula. Brown well, turning often. Mix yolks with cheese, chives and evaporated milk. Pour gently over the hash. Cover and cook until eggs are just set. Makes 4 servings.

CAMPER'S CHOUCROUTE GARNIE

- 4 thinck slices bacon
- 1 can (1 pound 11 ounces) sauerkraut
- 1 canned ham (1 pound)
- 1 can of sausages (8 ounces)
- 1 can of tongue (7½ ounces)
- 2 cans (1 pound each) small whole Idaho potatoes
- ¼ cup freeze dried chives
- 2 cloves garlic, crushed
- Beer
- Salt and pepper

In a Ductch oven or heavy pan fry the bacon half-crisp. with bacon and drippings. Arrange sliced meats and saus- Drain sauerkraut and mix it age on one side of the pot, drained potatoes on the other. Sprinkle with chives and garlic. Pour in beer to almost cover. Sprinkle lightly with salt and heavily with pepper. Cover tightly and simmer 30 minutes until everything is hot. Makes 4 servings.

Instant hashed brown potatoes and canned clams ease camp cooking.

There's air pollution and there's ear pollution.

Both conditions are in part attributable to the automobile. While curing air pollution, caused by excessive harmful emissions, is being brought under control, it still remains an environmental problem.

Fortunately ear pollution in the form of radio signal interference has been eliminated and will not be a problem if proper maintenance is practiced.

According to Champion Spark Plug Company, two major developments have controlled radio interference (RFI). In the past, noise from the automotive ignition system has interfered with radio signals. As a result, radio and television reception in cars and in the home have been interrupted by electrical interference emanating from passing vehicles (much in the way a vacuum cleaner in operation will distort radio and TV reception in the same room).

With the development of resistor-type ignition cables and resistor spark plugs, RFI is virtually eliminated. Cars manufactured today come equipped with the new resistor cables. In most new cars, resistor-type spark plugs also are original equipment.

Jones stops Dodgers

By BILL LANGLEY
P-B Sports Editor

LOS ANGELES — A year ago, Randy Jones was pitching against Cal Poly and La Verne College.

The Broncos and Leopards must have been tougher for the 23 year old lefthander than the Los Angeles Dodgers were Tuesday night.

Jones, a product of Chapman College was the complete master in pitching a brilliant four-hitter to give the San Diego Padres a 4-1 win over the Dodgers.

All of a sudden, the high flying Dodgers are 0-4 in July as the first big slump of the season has arrived. The Dodgers, who were struck by lightning three times in Cincinnati, figured to get well back home against the lowly Padres.

But the Padres, who don't know for certain which city will claim them next season, are enjoying their role as spoilers. San Diego is 4-2 on its current road trip to Cincinnati, Houston and Los Angeles.

By all rights, Jones should have enjoyed a shutout to go with his first major league victory.

The Dodgers only run came in the sixth inning when Bill Buckner's grounder scored Steve Yeager with an unearned tally. Yeager led off the inning by being safe on third baseman Dave Roberts' two-base throwing error and pinch-hitter Lee Lacey reaching base on another miscue by shortstop Derrell Thomas. With the first two batters on base via misplays it looked like the Dodgers would be in position to break the Jones' spell but the stylish lefthander was able to get out of it with only Yeager crossing the plate.

The Dodgers hit the ball only in the ninth inning when Davey Lopes and Buckner opened the frame with back to back line drive singles.

It looked like San Diego manager Don Zimmer might take Jones out but elected to stay with him and the decision paid off when Willie Davis grounded into a force play and Ron Cey bounced into a double play to end the game.

After being drafted last June out of Chapman, he was sent to the Class A Northwest League at Tri-Cities in Washington.

After compiling a brilliant 8-1 record for Alexandria, La. in the Class AA Texas League, the Padres brought him up in mid June of this year.

Henry Aaron belted a first-inning home run to spoil Jones' major league debut but many National League pitchers are members of that club. In his second outing, Jones was belted 7-0 by the Dodgers last week. Obviously, he learned something for his third start.

Jones didn't walk a batter but struck out only one in keeping the Dodgers on the ground in a similar fashion to Claude Osteen and Al Downing.

He was working on a two-hitter until the ninth inning with the only Dodger safeties being a bloop double by Davis in the first and single by Steve Garvey in the second.

Ddoger Starter Tommy John was just as effective through the first five innings in the quick 1:51 game but a series of bad breaks cost him in the sixth.

Big Nate Colbert cracked a bases-loaded double to score three runs after Thomas, Jerry Morales, and Roberts hit back-to-singles, some of them of the scratchy variety.

Colbert's blow was all Jones needed but San Diego added one more run in the seventh for good measure thanks to Charlie Hough's wildness.

A combination of a walk, wild pitch, stolen base, and three singles netted one run off of Hough.

Looking at the Dodgers' 13-14 record against lefthanders compared to a 38-17 mark against righthanders, Zimmer will start another southpaw, Rich Troedson (3-0), against Al Downing (6-3) in this evening's 6 p.m. Fourth of July contest.

Holtzman, Rudi join to blank Angels; Ryan, 3-0

OAKLAND (UPI) — Ken Holtzman snapped a personal five-game losing streak with a 12-strikeout five-hit performance and Joe Rudi gave him all the help he needed was a two-run homer Tuesday night in pacing the Oakland A's to a 3-0 victory over the California Angels.

The triumph boosted the A's back into first place in the American League West, a game ahead of Minnesota, and dropped the Angels three games back.

All the hits off Holtzman were singles. The Angels threatened in the ninth when Sandy Alomar hit his third single and Winston Llenas also singled but Holtzman struck out Bob Oliver to end the game.

The 12 strikeouts gave Holtzman a season high and helped him gain his 12th victory and his first since June 9.

Nolan Ryan went the distance for the Angels and suffered his seventh loss in his last 10 decisions and his 10th overall compared to nine victories. Ryan had 10 strikeouts.

Ryan retired the first 11 batters before Sal Bando singled in the fourth. Then Deron Johnson led off the fifth with a single and one out later Rudi hit a towering homer to center, his 10th of the season.

The A's added an insurance run in the seventh on walks to Johnson and Ray Fosse and a single by Dick Green.

Kenyan runs 2nd fastest steeplechase in world

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — Benjamin Jipcho of Kenya, the African star runner who closed in on the world mile record Monday, Tuesday night ran the second fastest 3,000 meters steeplechase race in the world but failed to whittle down his own one-week old worlds best.

Jipcho, 30, finished in 8:18.2. He failed to better the 8:14.0 record he set in Helsinki last week but was well below his own former world record of 8:19.8.

Runner-up was Swedens Anders Garderud, who shared the former record with Jipcho, and now raced for a new European and Swedish record of 8:18.4.

Tuesday's part of the Stockholm Olympic Stadium track and field meet lacked the tension of Monday night when Jipcho barely missed American Jim Ryun's six-year-old mile record of 3:51.1, finishing in 3:52.0.

But the 15,000 crowd woke up when the steeplechase started after having watched a series of average results earlier and cheered the Kenyan prison guard to the world's second best time ever.

"I ran just to win, not to set another new world record," Jipcho said after the race. "I felt sure of winning all the time, but Garderud started to press me during the two final laps. I'm sure I can go below 8:14.0 in another race," the Kenyan said.

His fellow countryman Evans Mogaka, who ended up fourth behind Finland's Tapio Kantanen, set the pace for the first half of the race until Jipcho and Garderud took the lead.

Jipcho was clocked in 2:48 minutes at the 1,000 meters mark, 4:11 at 1,500 meters and 5:36 at the 2,000 mark.

Russia's Olympic silver medalist Janis Lusis won the javelin event in 288 ft and Randy Williams of the U.S. won the broad jump in 25 ft.

American Al Feuerbach won the shotput in 68 ft.-10 and Uganda's Olympic winner John Akii-Bua won the 400 meters hurdles in 49.65 seconds ahead of Jim Bolding of the U.S. in 49.86.

Toulosa Kotu of Ethiopia won the concluding 10,000 meters race in 28 minutes 46.46 seconds, ahead of Kenya's Joshue Kineto in 28:51.73 and Sweden's Bengt Naaje in 29:00.06. Fekrou Degefa of Ethiopia was fourth in 29:01.80.

Steve Smith of the U.S., this season's best pole vaulter won in his specialty in 17 feet 4 ¾ inches. Frenchman Francois Tracanelli and Sweden's Kjell Isaksson both cleared 17-2 ¾. Hans Lagerqvist was fourth at 17-0 ¾, ahead of Bob Richards of the U.S., who cleared 16-5.

Former Nam vet starts in Miller

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Former Vietnam prisoner of war Capt. William Henderson of Milwaukee will start the Miller High Life 200 Sunday at Wisconsin State Fair Speedway, it was announced Monday.

Henderson was a prisoner for about one year and is currently on a convalescent leave. He will attend the Air Force school in San Antonio, Tex., in August before being transferred to Alaska.

This year's Miller is the richest on the U.S. Auto Club late-model stock car circuit with an estimated purse of more than $60,000.

Sittler gets $800,000 NHL contract

TORONTO (UPI) — The Toronto Maple Leafs Tuesday announced the signing of star center Darrl Sittler to a five-year, no-cut, no-trade contract for a reported $800,000.

The signing of the 22-year-old Sittler, a top point-getter last season with 29 goals and 48 assists, brought all but two of the National Hockey League team's players into the fold for the 1973-74 season.

Still unsigned are defenseman Mike Pelyk and forward Garry Monahan.

Sittler confirmed that he turned down an offer from the World Hockey Association (WHA) Toronto Toros that would have paid him $200,000 more for five seasons.

He said his decision was influenced b the fact that he would have been "about the only NHL player they've (the WHA) added for next season."

The signing of Sittler left the Leafs with only one notable bit of house-keeping outstanding — the hiring of a new coach.

At the press conference announcing Sittler's contract, George Armstrong, the former Leafs star, took himself out of the running for the job, saying he was happy with coaching the Junior Toronto Marlboros.

Leading contender now is Red Kelly, fired last season as coach of the Pittsburgh Penguins. Kelly, however, has legal problems with the Penguins regarding salary payments for the remaining three years of his contract with that team.

The Leafs also announced they have signed Eddie Shack, 36, who was acquired from the Penguins. Shack played with the Leafs once before, during the Punch Imlach era in the 1960s.

FIRING UP SOME FOURTH FUN

Allison heads top 40 list

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Bobby Allison of Hurytown, Ala., heads a field of 40 of the world's top stock car drivers today for what is expected to be one of the slowest Firecracker 400 races in recent years.

Allison qualified for the inside pole position Sunday with a pokey lap time of 179.619 miles per hour. That speed is considerably off the Firecracker qualifying record of 194.015 m.p.h. set by Cale Yarborough in the 1970 race.

New carburetir restrictions imposed by NASCAR officials held down lap times during qualifying and are expected to slow down the drivers during the 160-lap race today over the 2.5-mile Daytona International Speedway tri-oval track.

The restrictions, which reduce the size of the carburetor's throttle bore openings, slow down the cars by reducing the amount of air taken into the carburetor.

Many drivers believe the restrictions have the least effect on the smaller-engined cars such as the Chevrolets.

There are 15 Chevrolets in the 40-car field, including the two 1973 Chevys on the pole, Allison's and Cale Yarborough's.

Four-time Grand National champion Richard Petty starts from fourth position in his DayGlo red and blue 1973 Dodge. Petty has won the prestigious Daytona 500 three times, but has never won the Firecracker.

NASCAR regulars Bobby Isaac, David Pearson, Dennie Allison and Coo Coo Marlin are among the top 10 starting positions, along with 26-year-old Darrell Waltrip, odds-on favorite for NASCAR's rookie of the year.

Buddy Baker of Charlotte, N. C., starts his 1973 Dodge from the 31st position, the worst starting position he has had since he started big time racing.

Baker and his chief mechanic, Harry Hyde, have been the two most heavily hurt by the carburetor restrictions. Baker missed the first two days of qualifying trying to coax more speed out of his big engine Dodge and finally had to settle for a qualifying speed of 172.433 m.p.h., 16th fastest of the 40-car field.

"Now, I'm so far off, I just can't say how much I'm going to do," Baker said after his qualifying. "Honestly, I don't think I have a chance in this race. I just can't say I do."

Major league roundup

Schaal's 9th inning HR gives Royals 7-6 win over Twins in home run dual

By United Press International

Paul Schaal's second home run of the game, a leadoff shot in the ninth inning, lifted the Kansas City Royals to a 7-6 victory over the Minnesota Twins Tuesday night despite three homers by designated hitter Tony Oliva.

There were a total of seven roundtrippers in the game with Minnesota's Larry Hisle and Kansas City's Fred Patek getting the others.

Oliva had tied the game 6-6 on his third bases-empty homer of the game in the top of the ninth inning. Schaal's blast greeted reliever Ken Sanders, who took over for Bert Blyleven, to end the Twins' five-game wininng streak... The Chicago White Sox came up with 15 hits in the opener of a twi-nighter to help Wilbur Wood and his personal six-game losing streak with a 15-1 win over Texas, but the Rangers bounced back on the pitching of Jim Bibby in the nightcap, 2-1.

Wood, who's record improved to 15-11, had not won a game since June 8 but is still even with the 30-game pace set by Denny McClain in 1968.

Tony Muser, subbing for Dick Allen, scored four runs in the first game and Bill Melton drove in four runs. Wood struck out five and allowed only four hits in going the distance for the 15th time this season.

In the American League east, Ron Blomberg hit a towering 440-foot drive into the upper right field deck with two men on base in the first inning and Sparky Lyle gained his 21st save as the New York Yankees beat the Boston Red Sox 3-1.

The Yankees managed only four hits off Marty Pattin, but two of them came in the first inning after two were out, Matty Alou singled to left, Bobby Murcer walked and Blomberg followed with his fifth homer of the year.

Bobby Grich's two home runs and a six-run eighth inning explosion sparked the Baltimore Orioles to a 9-7 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers to snap a four-game losing streak in the first game of a doubleheader. The second game was suspended by a midnight curfew with the Brewers leading 4-1 after seven innings. It will be completed today.

Norm Cash drove in three runs with a pair of homers and reliever Ed Farmer picked up his second win in two nights as the Detroit Tigers extended their winning streak to five games with a 5-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians. The game was billed as a battle between Cy Young Award winning pitchers Gaylord Perry and brother Jim of the Tigers but neither hurler was around at the finish.

In the National League, Johnny Bench socked a two-run double and Bobby Tolan and Tony Perez added solo homers to power the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants. The game was delayed two hours and 25 minutes by rain.

The victory left the onrushing Reds seven games behind the Dodgers and moved them into third place, a percentage point ahead of the Houston Astros. Jack Billingham, with an assist from Clary Carroll, gained his 11th victory against five losses. Bobby Bond led off the first inning with his 23rd homer and ninth leadoff fourbagger of the season.

Bench's first inning double came off loser Juan Marichal, who left the game in the fourth inning after pulling a hamstring while running out a run-producing single.

Carl Morton allowed 10 hits but worked out of a string of late-inning jams to blank the Houston Astros, 1-0, and Mike Lum drove home Dusty Baker with the game's only run in the second inning to give the Atlanta Braves a 1-0 victory.

Loser Dave Roberts, now 7-6, was hit on the leg while waiting in the on-deck circle in the sevonth inning when the bat slipped out of the hands of Skip Jutze.

Bob Bailey hit two homers, including his fourth career grand slam, and drove in sevon runs, and Ken Singleton drove in five runs as the Montreal Expos established a club record for runs and hits by crushing the New York Mets 19-8.

Bailey blasted his 14th homer of the year with the bases loaded off Mets' reliever Tug McGraw in the sixth inning. The Expos produced a record 21 hits while the 19 runs off four New York pitchers were the most ever scored against the Mets in their history.

Lonborg, running his season record to 7-6, walked one and struck out one.

Rick Monday accounted for both Chicago runs with his 19th and 20th homers, reaching a career high for a season. His best previous was 18 in 1971 with Oakland.

The St. Louis Cardinals took advantage of wildness by Steve Blass to score six runs on six walks and two hits in the first three innings enroute to a 7-6 win, completing a doubleheader sweep over Pittsburgh. Rick Wise beat the Bucs 4-0 in the opener.

The two wins for the Cardinals put them over the .500 mark for the first time this season and gives them a 35-18 record since May 8 when they were 5-20.

Mayer advances to semis

WMBLEDON, England (UPI) — America's unseeded Alex "Sandy" Mayer Tuesday upset his second consecutive seed to reach the semifinals of the $131,000 Wimbledon lawn tennis championships and become the United States' last hope to win the men's singles title.

Mayer, 21, the U.S. intercollegiate champion who dumped top seed Ilie Nastase of Romania in the fourth round, fought back to a 3-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 center court victory against eighth seed Jurgen Fassbender of West Germany.

On the adjoining no. 1 court, Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill., was going down to fourth seed Alex Metreveli of Russia 8-6, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4, whom Mayer now faces Thursday for a place in the final.

At the other end of the draw, Britain's third seeded Roger Taylor ended 17-year old Bjorn Borg's giant-killing act 6-1, 6-8, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5 and will meet the other winning semifinalist, second seed Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia, who dumped the only other non-seeded player left in the singles, Vijay Amritraj of India, 6-4, 3-6, 4-6, 6-4, 7-5.

Mayer, of Wayne, N.J., looked slightly dazed as he walked off center court to the applause of a crowd which has always rooted for the underdog.

"I cannot actually see myself as the Wimbledon champion," said Mayer, the Stanford University student who June 23 won the NCAA title at Princeton, New Jersey.

"In general I don't feel I am under a great deal of pressure," Mayer said, despite being the only American left in the men's singles.

"I realized I wasn't in the match at all during the first two sets. But I got back into it, knowing I had nothing to lose and everything to win," he told a news conference in a basement below the center court.

Fassbender had taken the first two sets easily, prompting many spectators to leave the sunny center court to find what they thought would be more interesting matches outside.

But Mayer soon found the touch which upset Nastase. He began flashing back service returns that had the German non-plussed to level it 2-2 and go ahead 4-2 in the final set.

Fassbender broke back to pull alongside 4-4 but Mayer uncorked another series of horehand returns to lead him 5-4 with his service to follow. He set up match point with a running forehand passing shot that hugged the line and sealed the match on the next point with an unreturnable service.

Connors, the fifth seed, played a match full of errors against the chunky Russian who retrieved steadily and produced a string of aces which proved a comfortable foundation for victory.

Connors won the third set after the Russian became upset at a couple of crucial line calls which appeared to put him off his rhythm.

Taylor produced a remarkable show of center court sportsmanship in his match against Borg when he insisted on replaying a match point he had won because of a disputed line call.

Borg saved two match points at 1-5 in the final set and then set the packed center court humming with a come-back to 5-5. He missed a point to make it 6-5, lost the game and soon found himself 30-40 down with another match point to save.

Taylor served long, but the linesman remained silent and the crowd erupted—prematurely, as it turned out, because Taylor asked the umpire if the point could be replayed. It was and Borg immediately hammered a two-fisted backhander service return to make it deuce. But Borg netted the next serve and found himself back on the wrong end of match point again.

The Swede stretched wide for Taylor's final service and chopped it into the net to give Taylor the match for the second time.

Both men were cheered off the court and Borg once again had to fight his way through admiring schoolgirls to get to the dressing room.

A much more sober battle was being fought, meanwhile, alongside on the no. 1 court between the wiry Kodes, twice winner of the French title, and Amritraj, the man who sidelined fourth seed Owen Davidson in the fourth round.

Kodes, although seeded second, is somewhat the forgotten man of the tournament—his functional game unattractive alongside the brilliant flashes of players like Borg.

The Czech has looked unhappy on the fast grass throughout the tournament and today's quarter-final was no exception. He fought back after trailing 12 down in sets to set up a decisive fifth set —and won it when the Indian's volleying, his weakest point, let him down on crucial points.

Taylor is the only remaining rebel of the three Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP) players who defied the ATP boycott of Wimbledon.

Milwaukee open to lack 'names'

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) The big names will be missing when the Greater Milwaukee Open gets under way Thursday, but golf addicts here have learned to accept that and concentrate instead on the lesser lights and the stars of the future.

The $130,000 GMO offering a top prize of $26,000, is in conflict with the British Open for the fourth time in the six-year history of the local event.

Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, Lee Trevino, Gary Player, U.S. Open champ Johnny Miller and leading money winner Bruce Crampton have all opted to skip the GMO in favor of preparing for the prestigious British tourney.

Their absence leaves the GMO title wide open and that opportunity usually spurs those entered on to some of the best golf they are capable of.

According to GMO president Robert Templin, the field "will be stronger than we've had in the last four years."

Back for a crack at the title will be all five previous winners. Heading the list will be defending champion Jim Colbert whose victory a year ago came in the tourney's most exciting finish ever.

It was a five-man race between Colbert, George Johnson, Buddy Allin, Grier Jones and Chuck Courtney and tthe champion wasn't determined until the last putt was in the hole. Colbert will have to contend with those four again this week.

The other former GMO winners looking for their second win here include Dave Stockton (1968), Ken Still (1969), Deane Beman (1970) and Dave Eichelberger (1971).

Other longtime favorites in the field of 150 will be former Masters winners George Archer and Bob Goalby, former PGA champions Lionel Hebert and Al Geiberger and former U.S. Open champs Orville Moody and Ken Venturi.

Adding increased interest to this year's GMO will be a new site —the six-year-old Tuckaway Country Club course. Though its 7,010 yard championship layout is considerably longer than the Tripoli Country Club course used the last two years, the 36-36--72 par is still expected to fall with some regularity to the long-hitting pros.

It is hilly and tree-lined and has numerous huge traps strategically placed plus enough water hazards to cause problems for golfers who don't shoot with pinpoint accuracy.

Putting may also produce some problems. The greens are large and rolling and should provide the pros with plenty of opportunity to call on their green-reading savvy.

Another factor could be strong winds that are known to blow across Tuckaway.

There are four par five holes measuring 527, 524, 505 and 550 yards. The pros should be reaching these greens in two strokes—if they take care in placing their shots, because all are well guarded by traps.

Hadl feels trade to L.A. was promotion

LOS ANGELES — John Hadl, a man who has fired footballs through pro defenses for more than 16 miles in 11 seasons, got promoted last winter.

At 33, he was traded from San Diego, a pleasant enough paradise where football is a mild diversion, to Los Angeles, a voluminous metropolis where football is a mania.

"I feel like I'm moving up in the company," said Hadl. "Carroll Rosenbloom is the best owner in the business and I think the Los Angeles franchise is among the top two or thre in the league. I'm looking forward to playing for the Rams and the fans in L.A."

What type of man did the Rams acquire when they shipped defensive end Coy Bacon and running back Bobby Thomas to the Chargers?

Well, John Hadl does not look the part of a pro athlete, nor does he act like a man in the spotlight, an inherent position for a quarterback in the National Football League.

His face is round and pleasant, his hairline receding. At 6-1 and a little over 200 pounds, he is neither sleek nor massive. He arrives at a luncheon appointment dressed casually in a cowboy shirt, levis and boots.

Quarterbacks are supposed to be prima donnas, spoiled stars—attended by lawyers, agents, advisors. They come to appointments at their convenience. Hadl was alone and early.

John Hadl has been called the most popular player in pro football and two years ago he was voted the NFL's "Man of the Year."

Hadl, who will make his debut in a Ram uniform in the 28th annual Times Charity Game against the Dallas Cowboys Aug. 3 at the Coliseum, chatted amiably and articulately about his new job.

"The first thing I did when I was traded was request some films of last year's Ram games. I wanted to see what kind of offensive line they had. I was happy to see it's a good one, a very good one."

The former Kansas All-American has already spent considerable time with new Ram coach Chuck Knox.

"Chuck and his staff are the most up-to-date people I've met in a long time. They have the ability to get along with people and they really know their football.

"I think we'll play a wide-open offense, more along the lines of what we played when Sid Gillman was our coach in San Diego," said Hadl.

Hadl's credentials as a pro passer are impressive. He has completed 1,824 passes in 3,641 attempts for 26,938 yards and 201 touchdowns. His total yardage figure is sixth best of all-time behind John Unita, Y.A. Tittle, Fran Tarkenton, John Brodie and Sonny Jurgensen.

"I think I get better with age," laughed Hadl. "I can't see any reason why I can't play until I'm 38 or 39 unless something happens to my arm. The officials protect the quarterback more today than when I first came into the league and you really don't get hit that often.

"It's like any other job. The more you know your own ability, the more confidence you have in yourself. It's just a matter of mental maturity."

Hadl, who has never missed a pro game with an injury, came to San Diego in 1962 after being drafted No. 3 by the Chargers and No. 1 by the Detroit Lions.

"Detroit wanted me to be a running back. They told me could be another Paul Hornung. But I wanted to play quarterback and I was impressed by Don Klosterman (now the general manager of the Rams).

The veteran Hadl approaches his 12th training camp with the enthusiasm of a rookie.

"I've been doing my homework. When I get to camp (July 8 at Cal State Fullerton) I'll know the terminology and the plays. One of the most difficult things I must learn is to gauge the speed of my receivers.

"We have good receivers (Jack Snow, Lance Rentzel, Dick Gordon, Bob Klein and Harold Jackson, the league's top receiver last year) and I'll rely on them to tell me what they can do against certain situations and certain teams.

"Of course there's a lot of work involved with a new offense and a new coaching staff with new philosophies, but all the other Ram players are starting at the same place I am, so we're all even."

For nearly five months, Hadl and Roman Gabriel, the incumbent Ram quarterback, were listed together on the roster. Finally, Gabe was traded to Philadelphia.

"I wasn't surprised," admitted Hadl. "I thought it was best for everyone concerned. I kind of figured he'd be traded.

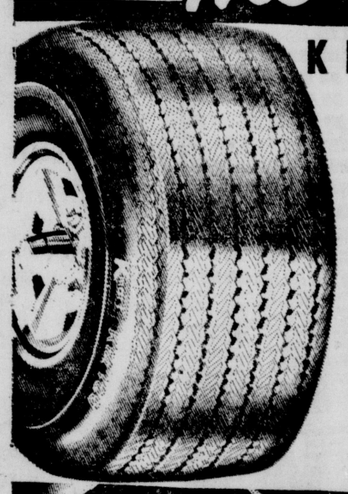

So everything has been cleared for the new Ram era. Rosenbloom, Kosterman, Knox, Hadl. All veterans. All extremely skilled. All aiming for a single goal — Super Bowl VIII.

Top prep cagers head for Europe

INDIANAPOLIS, Indiana (UPI) — Bill Lake, Carmel High School's 6-11, 200-pound center, joins 11 other prep basketball stars who leave Wednesday for a series of games in Europe.

The series, sponsored by the Amateur Athletic Union and basketball federations in Spain and Great Britain, begins July 6 with three games in England. Three games will be played against French and Spanish national squads in Barcelona, July 13-15.

Lake is one of three All-Americas on the squad, which includes Steve Grote a 6-2, 185pound guard from Elder High School in Cincinnati, and Jackie Robinson, a 6-6, 205-pound forward from Morningside High School in Los Angeles.

The squad was selected from the Youth National Championships held recently at Indiana Central College here.

Jim Gudger of East Texas State will coach the team. Gudger has coached five U.S. national teams which have won 53 of 61 games. He was head coach of the 1971 U.S. team at the Pan American Games in Calif, Colombia.

Howie Evans, coach of the National Youth champion New York Hawks and a sports columnist for New York Amsterdam News and Black Sport magazine, will serve as assistant coach.

American 'Cap starts week

INGLEWOOD — The $75,000 American Handicap today, the Fourth of July, kicks off a lucrative week of racing at Hollywood Park that includes the championship event of the season for the distaff division, and added money opportunities for both spring specialists and two-year-old colts.

Lakeside Handicap victor Wing Out and grass stakes winners Queen's Hustler, Tri Jet and Big Spruce all are pointing toward the mile and one-eighth American; but the biggest name on the list of "possibles" is 1973 Hollywood Gold Cup hero Kennedy Road, who could give trainer Charlie Whittingham his fourth straight triumph in the race.

Canadian-bred Kennedy Road has been pegged at 123 pounds for the American, while Tri Jet and Wing Out follow at 121 and 118, respectively. The American precedes the closing day Sunset Handicap as the last major grass handicap of the Inglewood meet.

In the $100,000 Vanity Handicap Saturday, Susan's Girl once again will try to snap her baffling losing streak at Hollywood Park. Susan's Girl always has run well at the Inglewood oval, but has yet to reach the winner's circle in five attempts. In two starts against members of her own sex this season she was second in the Long Beach Handicap to Zird Boots and runer-up to Minstrel Miss in the Milady Handicap..

Sharks acquire Dallas' Gordon

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Sharks hockey team announced today they had acquired Don Gordon, the right wing player who was leading scorer with the Dallas Blackhawks in the Central Hockey League last season.

Gordon, 25, scored 28 goals and had 35 assists for 63 points as the Blackhawks won their division.

Coach Terry Slater said the Sharks badly needed more strength at right wing. It was the second major trade during the offseason. The club recently acquired left wing Marc Tardis from the Montreal Canadiens.

Opening week

Hollywood Bowl to offer works of three composers

HOLLYWOOD — The Los Angeles Philharmonic will open Hollywood Bowl's 52nd season with three one-composer programs — Beethoven Tuesday, Tchaikivsky July 12 and Rachmaninoff July 14.

The orchestra will be led by Eugene Ormandy, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra.

On opening night the orchestra will play Beethoven's Eighth and Ninth symphonies, the latter with vocal soloists Veronica Tyler, Christina Krooskos, Seth McCoy and Douglas Lawrence. The Los Angeles Master Chorale will join the Philharmonic.

In the second concert, Ormandy will conduct the orchestra in two of Tchaikovsky's symphonies — the Fourth and Sixth. The July 14 concert will be an evening of Rachmaninoff as the Bowl celebrates the centenary of the Russian composer's birth. Pianist Van Cliburn will play the Third Concerto and Ormandy will conduct the Second Symphony.

Ormandy has spent half his life — 37 years — as conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra. A musician known throughout the world, he has a relationship with the Bowl that dates back more than 25 years. He was its music director in 1948, although it has been 13 years since he conducted the Philharmonic at the Bowl, and four years since he led the Philharmonic at the Music Center. In 1964 he brought his Philadelphia Orchestra to the Bowl.

Cliburn is well known through appearances in recital and as soloist with all the major symphonies. He earned fame as the winner of the first International Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow in 1948. A favorite of Los Angeles audiences, he has appeared numerous times with the Philharmonic both indoors and at the Bowl.

Engineer killed in train wreck said drunk

INDIO UPI) — An autopsy has revealed that an engineer and brakeman killed when their freight train collided with another train last week both had been drinking prior to the crash and that the engineer apparently was drunk.

Tests performed on the engineer, Everett C. Toddy, 53, showed he had an alcohol level of .16, well above the legal limit of .10 for intoxication. Brakeman R. K. Lanquist's blood had an alcoholic level of .10, according to the tests.

Grateful Dead show matches the records

By CURT WEBSTER

UNIVERSAL CITY — The liner notes on the Grateful Dead's last album ("Europe '72") assert "There is nothing like a Grateful Dead concert."

The Dead presented their case for such a statement last weekened in a three-night stand that opened the summer season at Universal City's new Amphitheater, as cozy and acoustically perfect a concert setting as any.

The Dead have been around so long, know so much about their music and have so consistently sent concert crowds home in a good mood that it's next to impossible to imagine them really pulling something that didn't work.

But it took some fancy playing Saturday night to bring back a crowd that was nearly lost for good during the jam session.

Somebody should tell the Dead that they don't jam nearly as well as they just play songs. They do their jamming in a kind of dissonant, atonal manner that tends to submerge rather than emphasize their individual merits.

Ironically, Jerry Garcia, the band's bearded lumberjack of a lead guitarist, got his best licks of the evening in when he was just doing his job on songs (his wah-wah restatement of the theme in Bob Weir's "Playing in the Band" was almost too much to take in all at once.)

Other than a little "Dark Star" from Jerry, the jam wasn't too interesting, but Weir was able to reach back and come up with some tremendous vocals on "Sugar Magnolia", to bring us back to our feet and assure us that we were, indeed, seeing the Grateful Dead.

After saying "good night" and waiting the mandatory five minutes, they gave us "One More Saturday Night" (it was now Sunday morning) for an encore.

The Grateful Dead first hit the rock scene, strictly without any assistance from the publicity machine, way back in the Haight-Ashbury and flower power days of the mid '60s.

Psychedelic rock flashed brilliantly, but briefly and the big groups of acid rock for the most part showed the adaptibility of a dinosaur and folded. The Dead, though, successfully survived the change intact by blending the hard rock of their early days with an infectious country base to produce a hybrid that was neighter.

They've been in a state of transformation ever since, and the process continues. It's more than the recent addition of Keith and Donna Godchaux on piano and vocals respectively. And it's certainly more than the death of "Pigpen" Rod McKernan.

In addition to the usual dose of familiar Dead anthems, we also got a sampling of some stuff we hadn't heard before Saturday night that we'll probably recognize in a few months on a llive album.

Maybe the bitgest surprise of the evening was a song conspicuous by its absence, "Truckin'", the autobiography of the Dead. It's one of the few songs that they simple can't match the studio version of in concert.

Unlike the Beatles,the Dead aren't fragmenting over the solo activities of Garcia and Weir. They treated us to live versions of cuts off both "Garcia" and "Ace" that sounded as together and tight as the studio recording.

Tim continues to march on for the Grateful Dead, and they've promised us another milestone sometime this month with the release of yet another album.

And while there's nothing like a Grateful Dead concert, their records aren't too easy to match either.

Upset mate to face attempted murder charges

REDDING (UPI) — Ronald J. Ehle, 27, Redding, today faced an attempted murder charge for allegedly running over a man three times with his small foreign car.

Authorities said Ehle hit Michael Pope with his car three times after Pope brought Ehle's estranged wife home following a ride last weekend. Pope, 28, was treated at a hospital for abrasions and released.

Independence Day isn't good for pets

By DR. FRANK MILLER

INDEPENDENCE DAY? — Not likely—not for millions of pets from goldfish to Great Danes. Your pets are completely dependent on you for everything from food and water to health care and for most everything else of importance from comfortable living quarters to love. It's your responsibility to provide for at least the physical requirements of your pets and never slight them. On a blazing summer day, this means providing shade for your anole lizard or your Australian terrier. It means being sure a potable water supply is available for your longhaired Himalayan cat or your shorthaired Peruvian guinea pig. Whenever our own pets are "allowed" to be completely independent, they are invariably being neglected. If you favor really independent animals, look (from a distance) to those who are born free—and do all you can to help them stay that way.

DEAR DR. MILLER: There is a scrawny, old, cat — I think he is old, he certainly looks and acts like it. He seems really quite feeble. He's in back of our house and we can't catch it or lure it in any way. He doesn't belong to anyone and he looks so miserable we want him either treated or put to sleep but can't get him. Is it inhumane to use a special trap to catch him? Some of those traps are not at all painful, are they? —K.S.

Dear K.S.: No, many of the box traps are only slightly psychologically painful to the trapped animal. Some wily cats, however, are very difficult to catch; continual rebaiting of such a trap for a long period of time may be necessary before you can lure the cautious cat into it. Of course, it is vital to inspect such a trap daily and not simply forget about it. Obviously, an animal trapped and forgotten would, indeed, suffer.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We'll be spending our month's vacation in a wilderness area where wolves are occasionally seen. Dana, our shepherd, will be in heat about that time. We thought it would be groovy if she had a wolf as a husband. Could this happen? —S.F.

Dear S.F.: It's at least a remote possibility that a male wolf might crossbreed with Dana. A she-wolf would be understandingly resentful of any such competition. Overall, the mating envisioned is unlikely and there certainly are potential hazards involved.

DEAR DR. MILLER: What kind of a place does the narrow-mouthed toad like to live in? What variety of food should you feed it? — N.N.

Dear N. N.: Microhyla olivacea prefers a damp, rocky environment. As far as foods are concerned, the narrow-mouthed toad is in rather a rut. Its main diet is ants. And for a change? No, thanks, he eats more of the same. Pass the ants. You could try other small-hard-bodied insects but don't be surprised if your offerings are turned down.

DEAR DR. MILLER: If a dog has been struck by a car and is in shock, what temperature should you be keeping him at? — T.P.

Dear T.P.: An environmental temperature of 78 to 80 degrees is best for most dogs suffering shock though many factors are involved in determining the ideal. Obviously you wouldn't be keeping such an animal at home anyway. It would be in the hospital where it would be receiving considerably more help than just the right temperature.

Airline, union sign contract

DALLAS (UPI) — Twenty teamsters unions have ratified a two-year contract with Braniff International Airlines, a Braniff spokesman has announced. A two-thirds majority was needed to ratify the contract. The terms were not announced.

LONG MAY IT WAVE . . .

. . . O'ER THE LAND OF THE FREE

Our flag symbolizes those ideals that the Declaration of Independence set forth on that very first Fourth of July. Let us pledge ourselves anew to the cause of liberty as we celebrate Independence Day, 1973. Let's work to keep democracy alive so that the stars and stripes may always wave "o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!"

Psychological fighting

Bullets, bombs giving way in Asian war to dancing girls, loudspeakers

CAMP BARBARA, South Vietnam (UPI) — Dancing girls, loud speakers and powerful vocal cords are the weapons of today's conflict between the South Vietnamese and the Communists in northernmost South Vietnam.

From the wreckage of Quang Tri city to the mountain top bases in Thua Thien province, 50 miles to the south, the South Vietnamese and Communist units in many places are only a few hundred feet apart.

There has been very little military fighting in the two provinces for several weeks, but a psychological war of words across the lines is heating up and taking some bizarre turns.

Near Camp Barbara, a hilltop position about 10 miles west of the main Highway 1 in Quang Tri province, government units reported North Vietnamese troops began calling to them one night across the invisible truce lines.

Using loud speakers, the Communists told the government troops: "We have dancing girls. Cross the lines and have a good time."

Government officers said their men shouted back: "Why should we bother? You guys have invaded our territory. You've brought these girls all the way down from the north. We get leave once a month and can go to Hue or fly to Saigon in one hour to visit our wives, girl friends and families."

Other sources said South Vietnamese helicopter pilots found North Vietnamese radio operators were coming on their military frequencies.

"Imperialist lackey," a North Vietnamese called a pilot.

"Come out of your jungle," taunted the pilot in reply. "Life is good here."

The South Vietnamese Marine Corps commandant, Brig. Gen. Bui The Lan, calls such incidents "mouth fighting."

At Quang Tri city, the "mouth fighting" is formalized. The two sides are seperated by the Thach Han river. They can see each other clearly, but the river is a little wide for regular shouting.

Instead, both sides have installed electronic loud speakers which blare across the river.

At noon on June 18, the day before South Vietnamese armed forces day, the South Vietnamese speakers boomed the announcement "tomorrow is armed forces day to show our military force for peace. We use our strength for peace. The enemy uses its forces to destroy."

A few minutes later, the North Vietnamese put on their own armed forces show, sending a Mig19 on a brief reconnaissance mission across South Vietnamese territory.

When there are no special announcements to make, both sides amplify radio programs. Radio Saigon was blaring to the North Vietnamese a political commentary on reconstruction of the South.

At the same time, Radio Hanoi was blasting the river bank with a program of agricultural questions and answers. A farmer had written to ask how to improve his production, and the radio was explaining the principles of crop rotation.

South Vietnamese military leaders are convinced the shouting to troops in remote areas is not improvised or spontaneous.

"They're trying to stimulate our men with the idea of the cease-fire and peace so that—without thinking it through—our men may be demoralized and want to leave their posts and return to their families," said the commander of the 1st Infantry Division, Brig. Gen. Le Van Than. 7"I tell my men, 'They are not regular soldiers. They are propagandists,'" he said.

The across-the-line propaganda techniques are showing signs of becoming increasingly sophisticated.

"In places where we know they can see us, our men face them while we are eating," said a division officer.

Protein information explained in detail

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB In your column on incomplete and complete proteins you failed to mention that the incomplete proteins must be eaten at the same meal or they won't complement each other.

Dear Reader — To clarify your point for the other readers, a protein is classified as complete if it has all of the essential amino acids (those the body can't manufacture from other food) we need and incomplete if it has only part of them. By eating foods which contain a sufficient variety of incomplete proteins to include all the essential amino acids, you can get by without complete proteins. A good example of this would be beans (which contain proteins which are almost complete) and corn or wheat. The combination of bean protein and cereal protein complement each other.

A classic experiment demonstrated that animal growth could not be achieved by either wheat or gelatin alone (they are incomplete proteins) but when they were fed together growth was normal.

It is generally believed that you should obtain all the essential amino acids at one time to get the desired effect. If you eat only part of them in one meal you will actually have a deficiency in amino acids and this will affect body growth and repair of tissues. Of course you can satisfy this requirement by simply including in the diet some sources of complete protein with all the essential amino acids. This means the meat group (mammal meat, fish or poultry) or milk and milk products.

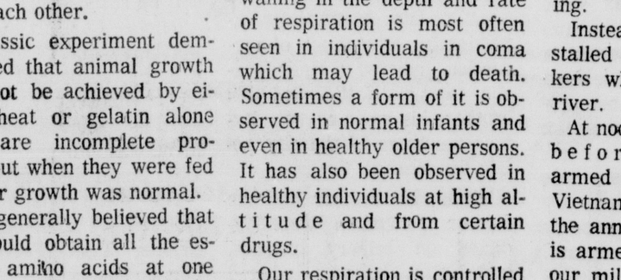

If your diet is to be completely devoid of animal products then you will need to be sure that at least one meal a day includes a sufficient variety of foods to include all the essential amino acids. Remember than in many parts of the world, people do well on only one complete meal a day and are lucky to get that.

DEAR DR. LAMB — What is Cheyne-Stokes? I know it is used in connection with a dying person.

Dar Reader — It's a change in the rhythm and rate of respiration. In recurring cycles, the respiratory rate gradually increases in depth and rate and then it gradually slows and becomes very shallow. The respiration may stop momentarily before there is again a gradual increase in rate and depth of breathing. This gradual waxing and waning in the depth and rate of respiration is most often seen in individuals in coma which may lead to death. Sometimes a form of it is observed in normal infants and even in healthy older persons. It has also been observed in healthy individuals at high altitude and from certain drugs.

Our respiration is controlled by respiratory centers within the brain. They respond to lack of oxygen and accumulation of carbon dioxide. With the build-up of carbon dioxide and decrease in oxygen in the bloodstream, the chemical stimulus to the centers may be great enough to reinitiate respiration. Thus, you get a gradual waxing and waning of the rate and depth of respiration in individuals with serious illnesses, particularly coma.

Romney to tell in fall whether he's candidate for U.S. senate from Utah

SALT LAKE CITY, (UPI) — On his 42nd wedding anniversary, a silver-haired George Romney sat in a hotel room overlooking the Mormon Temple and said he would decide by fall whether to run for the U.S. Senate from Utah.

"It was 42 years ago today I married my wife in the Salt Lake temple," the former secretary of housing and urban development said Monday. "Utah has been exceptionally good to me and my family."

"My life was shaped by those things that are distinctly different about Utah," said Romney, a life-long member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints Mormon.

Romney stressed he is not yet a candidate for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Sen. Wallace F. Bennett, R-Utah, next year.

"However, if I had sufficient reason to believe that the people of Utah wanted me to serve them for the next term, and the Republican party independents, and concerned Democrats wanted me to be their candidate, I would probably respond favorably . . . and resume residency here," he said. The former governor of Michigan, who will be 66 Sunday, said he realized he would have to make an early decision if he was going to have time to campaign in the state's 29 counties before the Republican nominating convention in the spring of 1974.

"Next fall," he said when asked how early he would make the decision.

Since leaving the Nixon Administration last year, Romney said he had been "exploring alternate activities in which I can apply my experience most effectively as we decide which way America will go."

He called the Watergate affair the "most tragic, senseless scandal in our nation's history."

"I hope it will jar people to take a hard look at concentrations of political and economic power," he said, "and look at ways of dispersing that power." The former cabinet member said President Nixon should play "an aggressive role in getting to the bottom of the Watergate affair. Otherwise the effectiveness of his administration will be destroyed."

Romney said he was first approached about running for the Senate in Utah a year ago and understands there are now "Romney Come Home" petitions being circulated in the state.

Asked if he was afraid of being labeled a carpetbagger, he replied "I'm not going to pressure anybody to come in here. I'll have to be certain the Republican Party, concerned Democrats and independents want me in the Senate before I run."

Romney also said he thought his age would be an asset rather than a liability.

"You can't have the understanding and the wisdom to deal with some of the problems facing the country without being my age," he said.

A spokesman for the Utah attorney general's office said Romney could move to Utah the day before the 1974 election and legally run.

"The U.S. Constitution requires a person running for the Senate to have domicile in the state he is going to represent," said Reed Russell, head of the attorney general's justice division. "Domicile is legally defined as having the intention to become a permanent resident of the state."

"Establishing residency for a federal office is simply a matter of intention" Russell said.

"However, Utah has a six-month residency requirement before a person can vote in a state election," he added.

"Conceivably Mr. Romney could be elected to the U.S. Senate from Utah and still be ineligible to vote in state elections."

Narcotics trial of singer put off indefinitely

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) — The trial of blues singer Etta James on charges of possessing heroin and narcotics paraphernalia has been postponed. It was originally scheduled to begin Monday and no future date has been set.

Miss James, 34, of Los Angeles, charged as Etta James Hawkins was arrested Oct. 14 at a San Antonio hotel by police who executed a search warrant shortly before she was to perform at a nightclub.

Bridge falls at dedication

MATELANDIA, Brazil (UPI) — Dozens of persons crawled onto a new bridge Monday near this village near the Paraguayan border to watch officials cut a ribbon to open it to traffic.

The bridge collapsed, killing at least seven persons and injuring another 30.

Coffee too bitter to swallow with sales tax hike; woman sues

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — California's new one-cent sales tax increase is going to be tested in Superior Court because a legal secretary objects to paying four cents tax on two cups of coffee.

"It's outrageous. I don't understand this tax. The state's coffers are already bulging," Miss Mary Grant, 31, of Sausalito said Monday.

Presiding Judge Joseph Karesh refused to issue a temporary restraining order against the next tax but he did set July 16 for a hearing before Judge Ira A. Brown Jr.

Miss Grant said the state had exceeded its power to raise money for public purposes and was in violation of due process of the law.

But she told the court that if she refused to pay the tax, she might be subject to criminal prosecution and would be deprived of goods and services necessary for her survival.

In her suit, she said that on Sunday when the new tax went into effect she paid 60 cents for two cups of coffee and was charged another four cents because of the tax hike.

The State of California, she said, has accumulated an $829 million budget surplus "as a result of income tax overpayment, federal revenue sharing, tax 'ferorms' and a booming economy which has generated bigger tax revenues than expected."

Both the legislature and Gov. Ronald Reagan agree the added tax is unnecessary at this time but since they could not agree on a bill to postpone it before the lawmakers went on vacation, it went into effect Sunday.

The tax is now six cents, instead of five cents, on the dollar, in most of the state.

Miss Grant named as defendants the state, attorney general Evelle J. Younger and the State Board of Equalization, which handles tax matters. Neither Younger nor board executive secretary W.W. Dunlop would comment amine it.

Pay off bonds with revenue, says Flournoy

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Although calling the one-cent state sales tax "ludicrously unjust," Controller Houston Flournoy has renewed his suggestion to use money produced by the tax to buy out some of the state's bonds.

"This course of action represents a sound investment for the future; $500 million in canceled bonds could save the taxpayers about $250 million in interest costs on 10-year bonds and $500 million on 20-year bonds," Flournoy said.

The controller and Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post both previously recommended that at least some of the surplus be used to cancel sale of construction bonds.

Gov. Ronald Reagan rejected the proposal on largely philosophical grounds, saying that the 1973 taxpayers should not be required to pay for a building that would be used by future Californians and that those citizens also should help finance public works.

In his statement Monday, Flournoy there "can be no justification for this sales tax increase under existing circumstances" in reference to the state's $829 million budget surplus from the 1972-73 fiscal year.

The boost in the tax went into effect at 12:01 a.m. Sunday after Reagan vetoed a bill which would have delayed it for six months and provided a onetime income tax rebate of 30 per cent.

The sales tax increase was enacted last year to help pay for the state's new property tax relief-school aid program. When the $829 million surplus emerged later, virtually everybody agreed a delay was in order.

But last minute efforts to reach a compromise between lawmakers, particularly Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, and Reagan failed to product an agreement.

Acupuncture held significant, but subject to abuses

NEW YORK (UPI) — A White House staff physician who accompanied President Nixon to China predicted that acupuncture "just could be the most significant medical rediscovery of modern times and Chinese herbal medicine may prove as important."

Speaking at the final scientific session of the American Medical Association's (AMA) 122nd annual convention, Dr. William Lukash urged some 1,000 doctors and other medical personnel to see that there is more clinical research in the United States "to establish acupuncture's true worth before it is put into practice."

Lukash said his skepticism turned to "frank amazement when he witnessed major surgery, apparently done successfully, on alert and smiling patients who had only needling to deaden the pain."

But another speaker, Dr James Y. P. Chen, a member of the acupuncture committee of the National Institute of Health, warned that the United States should go slow in adopting the medical art practiced in China for 7,000 years.

"There is much to be learned from Chinese medical practices before their achievements, particularly in acupuncture anesthesia, are made reproducible in Western countries," said Chen, of Santa Monica, Calif. "Even in China efforts are being made to place acupuncture on a more scientific ground."

David M. Link of the federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA) warned the physicians of "great potential for abuse" if acupuncture continues uncontrolled. The administration ordered last March that all acupuncture equipment be labeled to the effect that it can be used only by licensed medical practitioners.

"Our conclusion was that acupuncture still is in the experimental stage with no demonstrated safe and proper use," Link said, noting that some states already have banned the practice, while others have limited it to physicians and surgeons. Nevada will license practitioners even if they are not professionals.

Moderator of the symposium was Dr. Walter Judd, former Minnesota congressman and onetime medical missionary to China, who said the time was approaching when more state and federal regulation would be necessary to keep acupuncture out of the hands of "fly-by-night" non-professionals who might discredit a valid medical aid.

"I'm glad the AMA has sponsored this meeting to look at the phenomena of acupuncture coldly and scientifically," Judd said. "Frankly, I have been a little embarrassed because my profession has done little to date to study this practice, out of which can come great benefits. American medical science must find out whether acupuncture is effective and why."

One speaker, Dr. Ronald Melsack, professor of psychology at McGill University, Montreal, challenged the claim that acupuncture does not hurt. He said patients did not want to admit pain and often said they felt "hot" instead.

"It is bearable but painful," Melsack said. "The electrical stimulation hurts and the whirling needle gives a deep, achey feeling."

Jury indicts former mayor, others in probe

BOSSIER CITY, La. (UPI) — A county grand jury investigating allegations of corruption indicted former mayor George Nattin Sr., his brother, his son and two former members of the city police department Monday.

Nattin, his brother and the former policemen were indicted on bribery charges, and Nattin Jr. was indicted along with his father on a fraud charge.

Nattin's brother, Waylan Nattin, was the only one of the five who was not arrested Monday. Officers said he was out of the state but was expected to return and surrender.

The other four were freed on bond today.

State trooper suspended for taping 'strip'

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — A state trooper who enticed a woman to undress and videotaped the striptease while other members of his Mobile Drunk Driving Task Force yelled, "Atta girl!" will be suspended.

Safety Commissioner Bill Mayberry said Lt. John Dirck will be suspended for five days without pay. Mayberry said he believed the punishment was adequate and said Gov. David Hall agreed.

The scene was videotaped last fall by a Mobile Drunk Driving Task Force which Dirck supervised. He said voices could be heard in the background of the tape saying "atta girl" while the young woman, who was suspected of drunken driving, took her clothes off.

Mayberry said when he first heard about the tape, he ordered it destroyed. The Oklahoma Legislature also found out about it and asked Mayberry to produce the tape during its spring session. Mayberry said by that time the tape had been destroyed.

"It should never have been made," Mayberry said of the tape. "It had no use as evidence. It was of no value at the time I ordered it destroyed."

Mayberry said Dirck was suspended because "he was the man in charge and should get the punishment."

Women guards not cruel punishment, judge rules

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A San Quentin Prison convict who charged that women guards constituted "cruel and unusual punishment" received little sympathy from a federal judge Monday.

U.S. District Judge Robert H. Schnacke dismissed the civil rights suit by Larrance Hand, 41, but said he could refile it "if he sees fit to do so."

Hand charged in his suit, filed in March, that the prison's two women guards were "in a position" to watch him bathe and one of them bore a strong resemblance to his wife.

Schnacke said the suit was legally defective because it only said the women were "in a position" to invade his privacy.

"Likewise," the judge said, "it is difficult to take seriously as a genuine grievance his claim that he is attracted to (one woman guard) because she resembles his wife.

"The same logic would apply to the admittance of female visitors to prisons, the showing of motion picture films and television shows and other aspects of prison life."

10 in valley area gain dean's list

SAN LUIS OBISPO — Ten Pomona Valley area students have been named to the spring quarter dean's list at Cal Poly San Luis Obispo in recognition of academic excellence.

The students are Patrick Chew and William K. Foster, both of Claremont; Ava L. Batt and Archie W. Cates, both of Glendora; Bradley T. Manning of Hacienda Heights; Robert G. Howell, James R. Campbell, Linda J. Sharp and Carol Whitley, all of Pomona; and Kenneth W. Wiley of San Dimas.

Plea by police, firemen anger N.J. motorists

PATERSON, N.J. (UPI) — Motorists driving into Paterson were stopped by off-duty police and firemen Monday and handed, instead of tickets, leaflets asking them to support a bid for a pay raise for public safety workers.

Police Chief John Hess said he received "about a dozen" complaints from irate motorists. Newspapers and radio stations said they got more.

At one point, Hess said, he got a report that traffic on Route 4 was backed up for half a block. Some motorists said they were flagged down and handed the leaflets. Others got them at stop lights.

Police and firemen said about 400 of them took part in the action.

The pamphlets said policemen and firemen had not received a pay raise since Jan. 1, 1972.

And a look at Teamster link

Cox probes Nixon estates

LOS ANGELES (UPI) Special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox is looking into the purchase of President Nixon's California and Florida estates and Nixon's relationship with the Teamster's Union, a Los Angeles newspaper reported today.

Quoting a source familiar with the inquiry the paper said the investigation includes Nixon's commutation of the federal prison sentence of James R. Hoffa, former Teamster chief.

"A major focus of the inquiry is believed to be the source of funds for the $1.5 million San Clemente purchase," the paper said, referring to Nixon's Western White House estate.

"In addition, Cox's office has asked the General Services Administration to provide information on $1.3 million in GSA financed improvements on the two estates.

"One of the key questions to be answered, a source familiar with the inquiry said Monday, is whether any Republican campaign funds or money provided by unions or corporations was used to help the Nixons purchase their California home," the paper said.

The newspaper said Cox is investigating contributions to Nixon's campaign by "persons in the Las Vegas area who received loans" from the Teamster pension fund. "Some union officers allegedly pressured loan recipients into contributing to the campaign," the paper said.

The newspaper noted that a number of those prominent in the Watergate affair—including Dean, John Mitchell, John Ehrlichman and Charles W. Colson — "supported Hoffa's plea for executive clemency."

After the President commuted Hoffa's sentence, the former labor leader was released from prison, and both Hoffa and Teamsters backed Nixon for re-election. When Colson left his position as special counsel to the President to practice law, the Teamsters moved their $100,000-a-year legal business to Colson's firm.

In a separate development a Santa Ana newspaper reports that state tax authorities are looking into the alleged under-assessment of the San Clemente estate.

The newspaper quoted Abe Goldman, a member of the Board of Equalization, as saying, "It's a complicated affair and we haven't completed our study, but it's fair to say the President's property hasn't been assessed at anywhere near its real value."

A Profitable Weekend

with a little help from your friends

Know how to meet interesting people and influence a free flow of cash -- all in one exciting weekend?

It's called a Garage Sale.

Maybe you have been thinking that you have collected an awful lot of serviceable things you are no longer using. If you take inventory, you may be amazed at how much you have and how much valuable space these items are using.

SPECIAL (Limited Time) OFFER

GARAGE SALE SIGN KITS

When you place your low-cost GARAGE SALE Classified Ad in the Progress Bulletin, you may purchase an eye catching SIGN KIT. With each set of two (2) fluorescent signs, we will include a sheet of tips for holding a successful GARAGE SALE for Only ..... 50c Per Kit

COST OF KITS IF MAILED ....$1.00 ea.

WANT ADS

622-1201

CLASSIFIED AD DEPT.

Progress-Bulletin

TROUBLED OVER HIGH INTEREST RATES

It is true interest rates have risen, but they do seem to have stabilized in the past several months. And while the rates may seem high, they are not climbing as rapidly as are labor and material costs. An increase or a decrease of ½ percent in interest rates only amounts to 30c per month per $1000 on a 25 year loan. Is it really wise to deny yourself the security, pleasure and pride of home ownership on the vague hope of interest rates going down, thus saving you only $3 or $4 a month? The value of your home will increase at a much faster rate than can be gained by any lowering of interest rates.

WONDER WHERE TO BEGIN LOOKING?

Worry no more . . . most folks have found that the best place to shop for that new or lived-in home is in the Classified Real Estate columns of the Progress-Bulletin. It's here (and only here) that each day you'll find the very latest offerings of homes 'for sale' . . . advertised by the area's leading real estate firms and builders. Check the want ads today—and every day—to find the home that satisfies all your needs.

Made-to-Measure* Draperies

20% OFF

Sears Regular Low Prices

Here's the way to get that "made for your window" look at ready-made prices. You do the measuring. Then come in and select your fabrics from our wide assortment. Sheers. Florals. Casements. Prints. There's a special option of valancing, fringing, and tie-backs. In several weeks, you'll have expertly tailored draperies, either lined or unlined, in standard to custom fullness.

How to measure
For width, the width of your rod is all you need. For length, measure from top of your rod (A) to apron length (B) or floor length (C). Measure from bottom of rod if it is decorative.
